PREFACE.

THE first remark that the reviewer of this book is likely to make is that there is no index of the works enumerated in the 496 pages of catalogues which it contains. I cannot altogether blame him if on the strength of this defect he inclines to take a somewhat gloomy view of the whole compilation: but yet I venture to urge one or two considerations in arrest of judgment. Somewhat over five thousand volumes are represented in the catalogues collected in this volume: and probably quite half of these contain a number of separate works, usually by various authors, or provided with rather lengthy descriptive titles. Good examples may be found in the Catalogue of the Library of St Augustine's under the heading Collections (nos. 1530-1613): but they abound throughout. The indexing of all these tracts in a proper manner would have increased the bulk of this volume (already formidable enough) by one-half at least. The publication of the book must have been delayed for I know not how long; and I may as well confess that I do not know where I should have found the time or patience necessary for the work. However, if I had really considered such an index essential, I hope I should have struggled to make one. The fact is that I do not believe that much would have been gained by such an addition. This book, if I may venture to say so, is one which the student must learn the method of using. Nothing, not even the best index conceivable, can absolve him from the reading of the actual catalogues. It is only the study of the documents which will put him in a position to profit by the light they throw on history or literature.

There will be some, however, who do not desire to go very deeply into medieval bibliography, but who will be interested in books of some special class. They will seek to know, for instance, what classical authors were read or owned by the Canterbury monks. For these the task is not so heavy. The catalogues before us, notably that of St Augustine's, are to a great extent subject-catalogues; and a glance at the analytical table which follows this preface will show where groups of books of a given type may be found. They will need, it is true, to read through a considerable portion of the larger catalogue of Christ Church in order to make their survey complete: but, after all, the time spent in this will be very little longer than that required for looking up a series of references in an index.

Others, again, will be chiefly concerned to know what Canterbury books exist, and where they are to be found. Appendixes C and D (pp. 505, 524), together with the List of Manuscripts (pp. 545 sqq.), will tell them all that I have been able to gather on this subject. The information in Appendix C is not given under the heads of Libraries, but is arranged in the order in which the books occur in the catalogues. In Appendix D, which sets forth the books not recorded in catalogues, the arrangement is, of course, according to libraries. Anyone interested in a particular library will therefore have to glance through the Appendixes and List, and note the references to the collection of his choice. In some important cases (e.g. Trinity College, Cambridge; Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and Lambeth) the identifications have been already noted by me in previous publications of my own, viz. Catalogue of the Western Manuscripts in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge, vols. I.—III. 1900-1902; Sources of Abp Parker's Collection of Manuscripts, Cambridge Antiquarian Society, 1899; The Manuscripts in the Library of Lambeth Palace, Cambridge Antiquarian Society, 1900.

I have partially, but only partially, indicated which books exist by attaching daggers to the numbers which accompany the titles: see for an example p. 13. During the process of printing, however, a good many identifications were made, too late to be shown in the text. For the incompleteness of my indication I apologize; but the new arrivals were welcome.

In undertaking the publication of this book the University Press has, I fear, committed itself to a costly and unremunerative work; and its staff has had to grapple with some knotty problems in the way of printing. Alike to the Syndics and to the staff I am most grateful. I feel much gratitude also to a number of those in charge of manuscripts, upon whose working hours or whose leisure I have trespassed in the course of my researches. At the British Museum, at the Bodleian, at Trinity College, Dublin, and at many College libraries in Oxford and Cambridge, I have been instant, in season and out of season; but the help I sought has always been ungrudgingly given. Mr Gilson and Mr J. A. Herbert at the British Museum, Mr Nicholson and Mr Madan, at the Bodleian, Dr Abbott at Dublin, and the Rev. A. Plummer at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, are among those to whom I owe special acknowledgement: and to Abbot Gasquet, who supplied me with a list of all the Canterbury MSS. he had noted in the British Museum, my best thanks are due. He will, I am sure, be glad to find that the list was capable of enlargement.

INTRODUCTION.

CANTERBURY, the ecclesiastical centre of England, was also during the middle ages one of its most important literary centres. I do not mean by this that it was the home of a number of great writers: that was not the case, although many famous writers were connected with it, either as Archbishops or in other capacities. I am alluding to its preeminence among English cities as the home of books. It possessed at the Cathedral Priory of Christ Church, and at the Abbey of St Augustine, two of the largest libraries which could be found in the country. The foundation of both of these dates back to the earliest days of English Christianity; and throughout their history they preserved some remains, however scanty, of their primeval riches. We possess at the present day at once fuller records of these two collections than of any others of similar size; and larger remains in the shape of extant books than of any other English monastic libraries, except perhaps Durham and Bury St Edmunds. It is the purpose of this volume to elucidate the history, collect the records, and identify the remains of the two Canterbury libraries. To these I have added the catalogue of a third library, that of the Priory of St Martin at Dover, which was a dependency of the Priory of Christ Church.

The investigation of this and of kindred subjects has for the last few years occupied a large part of my leisure. Perhaps, therefore, my readers will expect some statement of the advantages which I imagine to be likely to accrue from the study.

There seem to me to be three branches into which the study of an ancient library usually divides itself. The first is its external history. We may investigate the position and character of the buildings in which it was housed at different times, the disposition of its book-cases, and the accidents of fire or pillage which befell it. The second is the study of its contents; the noting and identifying of the various works entered in its catalogues—often a matter of considerable difficulty: for, as the author of the Dover Catalogue says, many of the smaller treatises are very apt to be wrongly “baptized.” The third, which demands more time and labour than the other two, is the identification of the existing remains of the library. The only way in which this can be satisfactorily done is by a careful preliminary study of all available catalogues of manuscripts, and by a personal ocular inspection of whole collections, volume by volume.

Each of these processes has an interest for the investigator; and has, in addition, its importance to the world of letters. The first will throw light on that general history of the preservation of literature to which Mr J. W. Clark has recently made so precious a contribution in his Care of Books. The second may be described as a short cut to the knowledge of the minds of men of the past. If we know what books they stocked their brains from, we have at once a good gauge of their opportunities and a good criterion of their achievements. If a catalogue of the books owned by Shakespeare at his death were discovered, what educated man would not be profoundly interested? Should we not feel that the positive knowledge that the poet had owned such and such books helped us vastly in arriving at a true estimate of his mental culture? It is only less interesting to know what books Thomas a Becket possessed; or how the recovery of ancient literature and of the Greek tongue affected or did not affect the monks of Canterbury. This study, moreover, affords help which we cannot disregard in the tracking of lost works and in constructing the history of those which have survived.

The identification, lastly, of existing books as having belonged to this or that library has its attractions and its uses. There is the sentimental gratification of knowing that certain volumes have passed through the hands of some great man. There is the artistic interest of learning where some school of calligraphy or ornament arose; and there is the literary interest of discovering where a particular type of text was introduced. If we knew exactly what libraries the Codex Bezae had passed through and exactly where it was written, we should, it is evident, understand a good deal more about the textual problems which it offers than we do.

I do not know how far these remarks will go towards convincing anyone that researches of this kind are worth the time spent upon them; if they fail entirely to do so, I shall have to do as best I can without the sympathy of my critics. I am afraid, in any case, that I must plead guilty to having spent a great deal of time over this particular research and also to an intention of continuing such pursuits in the future.

A. THE CATHEDRAL PRIORY OF CHRIST CHURCH.

The history of the library of Christ Church Priory may be very conveniently divided into three main periods:

1. The Pre-Norman period.
2. The time from the Norman Conquest until the Dissolution.
3. The Dissolution of the Priory, and dispersion of the Collection.

The first of these periods is not susceptible of subdivision. In the second I distinguish three epochs; namely, (a) from Lanfranc to Becket, (b) from Becket to the completion of the Catalogue of Prior Henry of Eastry, (c) from that point to the Dissolution. The third period may be most conveniently treated in conjunction with the analogous period in the history of the Library of St Augustine's Abbey.

1. The Pre-Norman period.

That St Augustine the Apostle of the English possessed books is not only a probable assertion but actually matter of a constant tradition. That some of these books may have come to Christ Church is a plausible conjecture; but, so far as I can tell, it is a conjecture pure and simple, and is not supported by any evidence traditionary or otherwise. All the manuscripts which were ever supposed to have belonged to St Augustine were in the possession of the other great church of Canterbury, St Augustine's Abbey. We are therefore absolved for the present from the necessity of discussing the Augustinian or Gregorian books so-called, and may pass on to the next great figure among the pre-Norman worthies of Canterbury who enjoyed a repute for being book-learned. No one answers to this description until we come to Theodore of Tarsus (668-690).

There is an often-quoted passage in Bede's History which tells how Theodore and Hadrian of Africa, the abbot of St Augustine's, gathered disciples whom they instructed in Greek and Latin, and in the arts of poetry, astronomy, and ecclesiastical computation; and how, at the time when Bede was actually writing, some of those who had been taught by them were yet in being.

No doubt, then, Theodore brought with him to England books of a very interesting kind. I have elsewhere¹ had occasion to say something about the supposed remains of his collections, but it becomes necessary to enter upon the subject again in this place. Archbishop Parker in his book, De Antiquitate Britannicæ Ecclesiæ (p. 80), made the surprising statement that there existed in his possession ("apud nos") the following survivors of Theodore's books: a large and fine copy of Homer on paper, Homilies of Chrysostom in folio on vellum, the Psalter, and the Hypomnesticon of Josippus, all in Greek. All of these can be identified now. The Homer² and a Psalter³ are at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and the *Hypomnesticon*⁴ and Chrysostom⁵ are also at Cambridge in the University Library. We may add to the list—as containing inscriptions connecting them with Theodore—a Cicero¹ and an Euripides² at Corpus Christi, a Psalter³ at Trinity College, and an Euthymius⁴ in the University Library. One of these volumes, the Hypomnesticon, is as old as the twelfth century, and was almost certainly brought to England by the means of Robert Grosseteste. The Corpus Christi Psalter was also very probably his. The rest are all of the XIVth or XVth century. Several reasons cooperated in inducing Parker to attribute these books to Theodore. There was first his desire to find Theodore's books; there was the fact that the name Theodore does actually occur on the first leaf of the Homer in large gold letters (though of course it refers in reality to an owner of the fifteenth century); and there was also the fact that he must have found most of the volumes in question at Canterbury⁵. His estimate of their date is so obviously wrong as not to be misleading.

One book we still have, not mentioned by the good Archbishop, which possesses some claim to be considered Theodorian. This is the well-known Laudian manuscript in the Bodleian known as E of the Acts⁶; a Graeco-Latin book of the seventh century which has at one time been in Sardinia, and which Bede is believed to have had before him when he wrote his second commentary on the Acts. It is at least safe to say that the presence of such a book in England in Bede's time can hardly be entirely independent of the influence of Theodore or of Abbot Hadrian.

The long series of Saxon Archbishops who followed Theodore did not contribute much to literature. Tatwin is responsible for a series of riddles in verse. Nothelm was the recipient of a dedication from Bede. Of only one book now existing has it been asserted that it belonged to an Archbishop between Theodore and Dunstan. The manuscript marked Tiberius B. XI in the Cottonian Collection was once a complete copy of Alfred's version of Gregory's Liber Pastoralis. The old Cottonian Catalogue by Thomas Smith tells us that it was Archbishop Plegmund's property. The evidence for connecting it with him was a Saxon inscription in the volume, quoted by Wanley, who doubted whether it was conclusive on the point. It, along with most of the text, is gone: a few blackened fragments only were saved from the fire of 1731, and these give no clue to their previous history.

Dunstan, our next literary landmark, does not seem in any appreciable degree to have left his mark upon the library of Christ Church. The traces of his activity in this field must be looked for among the books from Glastonbury, of which he was at one time abbot. Still, in Claudius A. III in the Cottonian Collection we have a noble copy of the Privileges of Christ Church which has a reasonable claim to be regarded as his, and an Exposition of the Rule of St Benedict (Royal MSS. 10. A. 3) has been hesitatingly connected with his name, whether as author or donor: but I do not think it possible to make out a case for the attribution. Both of these are undoubtedly Christ Church books.

I do not wish to give the impression that an archbishop is the only person who could have given books to a library: but in truth we know very little of the personnel of Christ Church during the first centuries of its existence. The traditions or records which connect books with the names of individuals always select the names of the most prominent men. I can think of but one solitary instance in which a book was presented by a person who was not either an archbishop or a king. This is the beautiful copy of the Gospels now in the Royal Library at Stockholm, where it is known as the Codex Aureus. In it there is an often-quoted Saxon inscription which tells how it was given to Christ Church by the ealdorman Aelfred and his wife Werburg, who had rescued it from the hands of pirates. There must have been other lay persons, and certainly monks, who contributed to the stock of books; but their names are hidden from us.

Only the kings who made gifts to the library in this first period of its existence remain to be considered. It would be pleasant to be able to head the list with the name of Alfred: but though, as we shall see, there were some of his translations from the Latin at Christ Church, we cannot say positively that any one of them was presented by him.

Athelstan did certainly give some books which still exist. The Gospels of MacDurnan at Lambeth Palace have his name inscribed in them. The Cotton MS. Tiberius A. II was another of his gifts, and so in all probability was the Royal MS. I. B. 7, all of which are Gospel-books. His donations to the Abbey of St Augustine were of a more varied character.

Last among the kings we must mention Canute. A very fine copy of the Gospels presented by him to Christ Church is now among the Royal MSS. (I. D. 9).

None of these volumes are to be found in our catalogues. They were evidently not library-books, but service-books, or at least κειμήλια, kept in the sacristy or on the altar, and not placed on the shelves. We have, in fact, but one document to which I can appeal for some knowledge of the rank and file of the library in the pre-Norman period. This is that well-known list of the "English" (Anglo-Saxon) books belonging to it which forms a separate section in the catalogue of Prior Eastry (p. 51). Attention was first drawn to it by Wanley, and it has never since his time slipped out of the remembrance of scholars¹.

The items it contains are as follows :

1. Genesis anglice depicta. "Genesis in English, with pictures." If we cannot produce this actual volume, we can point to one which it must have resembled very closely, namely, the Bodleian "Caedmon" (MS. Junius 11). Though this is now very commonly assigned to the Winchester school, it yet seems to me quite possible that it may be a Christ Church book. In the first place the title written in the book itself in an old hand (XIV-XVth century) is very like that in the catalogue. It is Genesis in anglico. There is also an old title on the back of the volume, Genesis, in XIVth century capitals. Further there is a mark on f. 2, Xb (which occurs again on f. 2b and f. 52): this, according to Mr E. W. B. Nicholson, stands for Christe benedic: but even so it resembles the Christ Church marks in position and character. I do not know whether the fact that St Augustine's possessed a rather similar book, the Anglo-Saxon Heptateuch (Claudius B. IV), and called it Genesis anglice ought to go for anything in this connexion: probably not. But I think cause ought to be shown for assigning the Junius MS. away from Christ Church. It is possible, by the way, to reconcile both views through the supposition that, like the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, the Genesis was sent from Winchester to Canterbury after the fire of 1067.

2. Liber Passionum et Sermones anglice.

Among the many volumes of Anglo-Saxon Homilies and Lives of Saints which exist at Corpus Christi College alone, to say nothing of other libraries, it is well-nigh out of the question to try and identify this. Still it is rather more than likely that the first part of Vespasian D. XIV (a book of homilies etc.) is from Christ Church, for it has on its first leaf (XII–XIIIth cent.) a collect for St Thomas of Canterbury.

Galba A. II, now destroyed, was traditionally said to have belonged to Anselm: what the tradition rested on we cannot tell, but Galba A. III (also destroyed) is asserted by Smith to have been the second volume of Galba A. II and to have belonged to Fountains Abbey. This makes the connexion with Christ Church rather doubtful.

3. Dialogus beati Gregorii.

4. Boethius de consolatione. ? Otho A. VI (burnt).

5. Herbarius anglice depictus.

Identified (correctly, as I think) by Wanley with the MS. Vitellius C. III.

6. Liber sermonum Catholicorum.

7. Liber sermonum beati Augustini.

8. Cronica vetustissima.

There is no doubt that this is the Corpus Christi MS. of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle (no. 173). Mr Plummer, in the Introduction to the second volume of his Two Saxon Chronicles, describes and discusses this MS. very minutely. He believes it to have been written for the most part at Winchester and transferred to Canterbury rather late in the eleventh century: very possibly, as was suggested by Professor Earle, in consequence of the destruction of Canterbury books in the great fire of 1067.

9. Liber de ordine monastico.

I suppose this was a Customary. We do not appear to possess it.

10. Cronica secundum Bedam.

Alfred's version of Bede's History. I am tempted to think that this may be the copy in the University Library, Cambridge (Kk. 3. 18) which came from Parker and has the remains of a title resembling those in Christ Church books.

11. Textus iv Euangeliorum.

Most likely the Royal MS. 1. A. 14, which is certainly a Christ Church book.

12. Actus apostolorum.

I know of no copy of the Acts in Anglo-Saxon.

13. Liber Sermonum.

14. Regula Canonicorum.

Presumably the Rule of St Augustine.

15. Cronica Latine et Anglice.

This is bound up with several other volumes in Domitian VIII. It is Mr Plummer's F in his edition of the Chronicle.

16. Liber Edwini.

It seems likely that this may have been a somewhat later book, the production of the early twelfth century scribe Eadwin, whose Bible and Psalter occur just afterwards. The last-named is, of course, the famous Canterbury Psalter at Trinity College, Cambridge.

17. Exceptiones de Prisciano.

A grammatical compilation, perhaps by Aelfric Bata.

A copy of Aelfric's Grammar in the University Library, Cambridge (Hh. 1. 10), has two peculiarities, which may serve to connect it with Christ Church. Firstly, the corner of f. 1, where the Christ Church mark would have been, is cut away. Secondly, it is lettered on the back: Excerpta ex Prisc. This lettering was done in the eighteenth century, when the book was rebound and its fly-leaves destroyed. It will be observed that it is not the natural title for Aelfric's Grammar and that it agrees with our entry. It may very well have been inscribed on the lost fly-leaf.

In another old catalogue (no. 1 in my edition) mention is made of a Donatus Anglice. By this again is very possibly intended the work of Aelfric Bata. We have a Christ Church copy of this in Tiberius A. III. Doubtless, among the Anglo-Saxon manuscripts we have, there are others which come from the same place. A Canterbury origin, for instance, has been claimed for the copy of Alfred's version of Orosius which is bound up in Tiberius B. I, and once belonged to Robert Talbot, the friend of Leland. We have seen, however, that no copy of Orosius is entered among the English books in the catalogue; and at the present day the Cottonian Orosius contains no evidence of its provenance: nor is it possible to speak with certainty of the origin of the older Lauderdale MS. (now at Helmingham) which appears to have been the archetype of the Cottonian volume.

Few other Canterbury books, whether in Anglo-Saxon or Latin, can be definitely assigned to the pre-Norman period. An Amalarius at Corpus Christi College, written at Landevennech, containing Breton glosses: a Juvenius in uncials also at Corpus Christi: an Arator at Trinity College (B. 14. 3), a little Gospel-book at St John's College, Oxford (no. 194), all occupied places on the Christ Church shelves, and are for the most part traceable in the catalogues. We cannot doubt that they had many companions. What these were there is nothing to tell us. As to the circumstances of their disappearance we have some information. It will be remembered that in 1067 a great fire devastated the city of Canterbury and utterly destroyed the metropolitan cathedral, together with the greater part of the monastic buildings. Eadmer, from whom our knowledge of this is derived, makes special mention of the loss of "sacred and profane books" as well as of the ancient charters and papal bulls belonging to the church: which latter he bewails at much greater length. It is painful and fortunately unprofitable to speculate on the character and value of the treasures of which this great conflagration deprived us. They were doubtless many of them irreplaceable;

but the man was at hand who was ready to do his best to replace them quocunque modo.

2 (a). From Lanfranc to Becket.

The second great period in the history of our library—from 1067 to the Dissolution—is susceptible of a good many subdivisions. That which I have elected to adopt is the following :

From Lanfranc to Becket.

From Becket to the Inventory of Henry of Eastrý (about 1330).

From Henry of Eastrý to the Dissolution.

With Lanfranc—Italian by birth and Norman by residence—a wave of foreign influence breaks in upon Christ Church. His importance as a monastic reformer and as a theologian is, of course, widely known. Hitherto, however, attention has not been drawn to his activity as a collector of books, and as the first great organizer of a library whom Christ Church had known. As we have just seen, the losses sustained in the fire of 1067 were an incentive as powerful as any that could be found to the accumulation of fresh stores of books. Lanfranc's best energies must have been stirred by the spectacle of the few volumes that had escaped the flames. He had been a student of "profane" literature, as he tells the Irish bishop Donald; and though he had come to regard his early favourites with something like a pious horror, it is plain that he was a zealous furtherer of such learning as he still considered sound. Moreover, it is in his statutes that the weighty provisions for the regular distribution of books among the monks, and their return at the year's end, are first formulated. These statutes, promulgated for the use of English Benedictines in general, can hardly have been otherwise than strictly observed at Canterbury. The extent of Lanfranc's benefactions is not fairly represented in the catalogues we have. I do not find him credited with more than five volumes, a Book of Homilies, a Priscian, and three copies of the Pauline Epistles. It is from an examination of the remains of the library that I derive my estimate of his importance.

There is in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge, a manuscript of Canons of Councils and Papal Decretals, consisting of two parts written by two distinct hands¹. The date is late in the eleventh century. At the end is a declaration, perhaps in Lanfranc's own hand, that Lanfranc had brought it from Bec in Normandy and presented it to Christ Church. The hand in which this is written is well-marked and noteworthy. The letters are prolific of apices, giving the whole a somewhat "prickly" appearance; and it has something of an Italian aspect. One-half of the volume in which it occurs is written in a hand of this type, and at Trinity College and elsewhere are some scores of volumes undoubtedly from Christ Church, all of one epoch (XI–XIIth cent.) and all in hands modelled on this. Another distinguishing mark in these volumes is the employment of a peculiar purple in the decorative initials and headings. I am unable to doubt that this remarkable school of writing is directly due to the influence of Lanfranc. The nearest approaches I find to it in England are in certain manuscripts which were once at St Augustine's Abbey, and in others which belonged to Rochester. It can be shown that books did occasionally pass from Christ Church to St Augustine's, and it can also be shown that certain of the Rochester books were written at Christ Church.

A very similar hand is to be found in some books written in Normandy, which may also have been produced under Lanfranc's influence. A good specimen is afforded by a manuscript at Emmanuel College (I. 2. 8), formerly the property of the church of St Stephen at Caen, of which Lanfranc was the first abbot. It is probable enough that an examination of the remains of the library of Bec would reveal the existence of many examples of this form of writing.

The name of one Canterbury scribe only who wrote in this sort of hand is known to me. This was one Thiodricus. His name occurs in the great catalogue as the donor or writer of a volume of miscellaneous contents including a tract in verse by himself (no. 105); and he was the writer of a volume of Augustine's works now at Trinity College. A few verses by him occur in this book. Very probably he, like Lanfranc, was an Italian.

The Lanfrancian script, as I should like to call it, lasted through a large part of the twelfth century. The books in which it is employed would, if gathered together, form no bad library in themselves. The principal ingredient in the collection is, as we might expect, furnished by the works of the Four Doctors, Augustine in particular. There are, besides, many standard commentaries by other authors; Isidore, Bede, Hesychius on Leviticus, Angelomus on Kings, Haymo on Isaiah. Josephus, Aldhelm, Boethius, and Solinus are among the authors represented by our extant volumes.

It is on all accounts likely that Anselm as well as Lanfranc enriched the library of Christ Church. We may regard it as certain that he carried on the work begun by his predecessor with at least equal energy. Accident, however, has deprived us of the means of forming a detailed estimate of what he did. No class of books, no single volume, even, is entered as his gift in any of our catalogues. Copies of some of his works of a date near his own lifetime have survived, which were in the library, and it is a reasonable suggestion that future editors of Anselm should pay special attention to these volumes, which ought to present a specially good text.

I have ended my first subdivision of the period we are considering with Becket, because we happen to have the means of forming some idea of the extent of the Priory library at a time shortly before his death.

A twelfth century copy of the Music and Arithmetic of Boethius, formerly belonging to the Cloister (as distinct from the library) of Christ Church, is now in the University Library at Cambridge¹. It contains, on three leaves at the end, a catalogue of books (which forms the first item in my collection of texts). These books were clearly in the Christ Church library, for a large number of them are found again in our principal catalogue. No less clear is it that the catalogue is but a fragment, for some of the most numerous classes of books are unrepresented in it. It contains, roughly speaking, the books relating to Grammar, Rhetoric, Music, Arithmetic, Poetry, Logic, Astronomy, and Geometry. Theology, Medicine, and Law are absent save for a volume or two at the end. The most recent work named is the Entheticus of John of Salisbury, and the presence of this shows that we are in Becket's period. But the absence of any book from Becket, and of any books about him, coupled with the handwriting of the fragment, shows that he had not yet fallen before the swords of the four knights.

The character and arrangement of the library thus partially revealed to us deserve study.

It is probable, judging from the analogy of other libraries of the period, that the collection of books was not kept in a room specially built to contain it, nor, indeed, in a room at all. We may be fairly confident that it was stored in a series of presses in the cloister. The number of volumes in the fragment of the catalogue is 223, not more than would fill one press of decent size. Two, or at most three more, would suffice to hold the entire collection.

In the catalogue before us there is no indication of the place, in press or shelf, which the volumes occupied. There is, however, a system of marking which I have encountered nowhere else. Before the title of each book stands a curious sign, sometimes consisting of two or three capital letters, sometimes of a monogram, sometimes of a single character which is either Greek or Runic or nondescript. In a few cases only this mark is appropriate to the book designated. Thus, a Priscian given by William Morsel is marked MOR., a Cato Ca., and so forth.

The purpose of these signs was long obscure to me, until I found that almost all of the earlier Christ Church manuscripts had similar marks inscribed on their first leaves. Thus, three volumes of Jerome's Commentaries at Trinity College (B. 5. 22—24) have respectively the marks C., D., E.; and very many other examples may be seen in that collection. It became probable, then, that if I could come upon any of the books enumerated in this catalogue I should find that they contained the mark attributed to them therein. This proved to be the case. In the catalogue there are two entries

EE. Musica boecii.

TT. Musica hogerii.

The manuscript R. 15. 22 at Trinity College is a Musica Boethii from Christ Church, and has on its first leaf the mark EE. The manuscript no. 260 at Corpus Christi is a Musica Hogerii, and has the mark TT. Evidently, therefore, we possess the key to the system of this catalogue. Each volume of the collection had its special mark, and this mark was entered in the catalogue. We have here a valuable help to the identification of Christ Church books, whose fly-leaves, containing more explicit information, may have disappeared.

Now for a glance at the character of the collection. By a fortunate accident it is to the secular part of the library that our fragment relates. As I have already indicated, it is digested into subjects. We begin with Grammar, and find five copies of Priscian's full grammar, five more of the two books of his Constructions, and 19 other grammatical books including a Donatus in Greek (of which more elsewhere) and one in English, which I suppose (as I have said) to be the work of Aelfric Bata. In Rhetoric we have nine books, all copies of Cicero's Rhetorica. In Music seven, in Arithmetic eight. Next come Latin classics, which were probably classed as Poetry or Grammar. Eleven copies of Macrobius, a majority of which probably contained only his comment on the Somnium Scipionis and not his Saturnalia. Fifteen volumes containing Martianus Capella, Plato (by which is meant the Timaeus in Latin), and glosses on them. Eight copies of Boethius, seven of which are the De Consolatione Philosophiae. Five Terences and one gloss. Eight Sallusts. Three copies of small treatises of Cicero. Four of Arator. Eight of Virgil, whole or partial, with glosses. Eight of Horace, five of Lucan, six of Statius (whereof four had the Thebaid and two the Achilleid). Four of Juvenal, and a gloss: nine of Persius. A less clearly divided section follows, in which we distinguish three entries of Prudentius, five of Prosper, two of Juvencus, two of Sedulius, two of Cato, one more Arator, five of Ovid, two of Theodulus and one of Avianus, besides a book which might be an anthology or a dictionary—'liber in eidentiam auctorum.' Astronomy comes next, with nine volumes, succeeded by a miscellaneous list of twenty-one volumes, a majority being theological. These miscellaneous books I take to be recent acquisitions. Lastly we have twenty-two books on dialectic and five more miscellaneous entries which include John of Salisbury's Entheticus and a couple of books on law.

This is a very remarkable list. We do not, to be sure, see in it the names of lost classics or ancient Christian writers (and perhaps it is as well for our peace of mind that we do not); but we do see a very sufficient equipment for the study of Latin literature, and of the liberal arts and sciences as understood in the twelfth century. Here are tracks laid down which might have led to an early revival of classical learning. Had the contemporary monks of St Gall or of Lorsch been penetrated by the love of letters that evidently inspired the Christ Church men we could have faced the period of the schoolmen with lighter hearts. The stray copies of Tacitus, Valerius Flaccus, and the rest, would have been multiplied; in fact, rich though Poggio's harvest was, I cannot but believe that it might have been well-nigh doubled.

To return to our fragment. Subtracting about a score of miscellaneous divinity books, we see that the secular library (without medicine, accidentally unrepresented) consisted of about two hundred books. Many of these were duplicates, and this fact indicates that there was need of multiplying some authors for teaching purposes. The schools of the monastery must have been at this time an important element in its life; but my researches have not served to throw light upon the details of their management. The investigation of this department is a task which I am forced to leave to others.

In the library as a whole theological books were, I doubt not, in a majority of at least two to one, and we must allow a margin beyond that for Medicine, Law, Chronicle-books, and English literature. At this rate we cannot allow less than from 600 to 700 volumes as the total extent of the collection. In the later catalogue, which we are soon to discuss, the older portion of the library, which is distinguishable from the rest, does not seem to comprise much over 500 volumes: but a comparison of our fragment with it shows that many books have disappeared. There are five Rhetorics, for example, instead of seven: the number of Arithmetics is halved. Three Terences are gone, and one Lucan, and the rest of the classical poets are, probably by accident, entirely omitted.

It is time, however, to leave the Old Catalogue, and the period it represents.

2 (b). From Becket to the Catalogue of Prior Henry of Eastry.

In studying our next period (1170 to 1331) we are dependent upon one document, but that is by far the largest and most important which we have to deal with in the whole course of our investigation. It is the catalogue of the books made in the time of Henry of Eastry (de Estria) who was Prior of Christ Church from 1284 to 1331. He left a prominent mark upon the Canterbury of to-day by the erection of the stone screen which surrounds the choir of the Cathedral. Another great monument of his Priorate, not so conspicuous, is the inventory drawn up by his orders of all the possessions of the Priory in the way of lands, plate, vestments, and books. It is in the Cottonian Collection, in the volume marked Galba E. iv. Twenty leaves of this (ff. 128-147), written in three columns on a page in a fine large early fourteenth century hand, contain the catalogue of the library of Christ Church. It has been printed once already, by Edward Edwards (Memoirs of Libraries, 1859, I. 122-235). Though we cannot be otherwise than very grateful to this careful and laborious writer for making the document accessible, it is necessary to point out that his method of printing it gives a very misleading idea of the extent of the collection. He makes it consist of 698 volumes; I estimate the number at something near 1850. It is clearly necessary that I should explain at length how so glaring a discrepancy has arisen.

We will take a paragraph of Edwards's edition: it reads thus:

- [cclvii] In hoc volumine continentur:
 Liber Regum
 Ysaías propheta
 Ieremias propheta
 Duodecim parvi prophete.
 [cclviii] Libri R. de la Lee:
 Summa provincialis
 Expositio super psalterium
 Itinerarium Gerald.
 [cclix] In hoc volumine continentur:
 Descriptio Cambrie
 Summa I. de Abeville
 etc.

Thus Edwards's practice is to place the beginning of a new volume wherever he finds a rubric in the manuscript. Let me now quote the above passage in the form in which it appears in the manuscript.

- ¶ Quinque libri Moysi
In hoc uolumine continentur:
 Liber Regum
 Ysaías propheta
 Ieremias propheta
 Duodecim parui prophete.
Libri R. de la Lee:
 Summa prouincialis
 Expositio super psalterium
 ¶ Itinerarium Gerald
In hoc volumine continentur:
 Descriptio Cambrie
 Summa I. de Abeville
 etc.

The system of the monastic cataloguer will partially appear from this extract. When a volume contains more than one work, he puts a section-mark (§) beside the first item, and after the first item he writes In hoc uolumine continentur. This rubric is, therefore, a mark of conjunction between the items that precede and follow it, not of separation. The cataloguer does not, however, place any mark to show at what point the contents of the volume end. The student has to judge of that for himself. I distinguish five volumes in the above extract. The first contains the Pentateuch, King's, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and the twelve prophets. The second, the Summa Provincialis; the third, the exposition of the Psalter. The fourth (now Rawlinson B. 188 in the Bodleian) contains the Itinerary and Topography of Giraldus Cambrensis, the fifth the Summa of John of Abbeville.

If further proof be required that Edwards has divided his text wrongly, we need only turn to the numbers clxviii and clxix in his edition. Under clxviii he has lumped together all the Anglo-Saxon books of which we have already treated together with three more, and the heading Libri Anglici. Under clxix are no less than 38 volumes, headed Libri de armariolo claustris (though he has omitted this rubric), and beginning thus:

Biblia bipartita in infirmaria in duobus uoluminibus

Biblia Edwini

Tripartitum psalterium Edwini.

The last of these volumes we possess at this moment. It is, of course, the Canterbury Psalter at Trinity College, Cambridge.

The method employed by our cataloguer is evidently a bad one. His failure to mark off clearly one volume from another is particularly unfortunate. In hundreds of cases one is reduced to dividing the books conjecturally. Decisive evidence is forthcoming when we are able to identify the actual volumes in our libraries. Otherwise one has to base one's conjecture on a knowledge of the bulk of the treatises enumerated.

It is not only in this matter that the catalogue is defective. When we pass, as we must now do, to the examination of the general arrangement of the library, we shall find more food for criticism.

We ask first if there is any indication how the library was divided, and at first it seems that our question is likely to be answered in a complete and satisfying fashion. A most business-like start is made by the scribe, with Prima Demonstratio.

Distinctio Prima.

But when we look for Distinctio secunda, tertia, and the rest, we look in vain. There is no further mark of division until p. 82, when we arrive at Secunda Demonstratio.

Distinctio Prima.

In this second part of the catalogue we are a little better treated. Distinctions 2, 3, 4 are marked, and also Distinctions 11-17: then comes a division headed Libri extra gradus, and this is the last. In short, the classification is recorded only in a very fragmentary way; yet what we have of it helps us considerably.

The whole library is arranged in two main divisions called Demonstrations. These are subdivided into Distinctions, which in later documents are usually the equivalent of book-cases or classes. There are as many as seventeen Distinctions in the second Demonstration, and there were probably as many, or nearly as many, in the first. The number of volumes contained in each Distinction clearly varied a good deal. Those which are susceptible of being gauged with fair accuracy held from 35 to 69 books. I will postpone for a short time the further consideration of these external arrangements, and turn to what I may call the internal disposition, by which I mean the guiding principles which can be traced in the arrangement of the books.

The first Demonstration contains these main classes:

Theology under the names of authors arranged alphabetically from A to V.

Chronicles, Compotus, Martyrologies, Monastic rules.

English books.

Books kept in the Cloister.

Passionals, Lectionaries, Homiliaries.

The secular books, viz.:

Grammar, Rhetoric, Dialectic, Philosophy.

Arithmetic and Music.

Physic.

Up to this point we have a well-marked classification according to subject, and from the extant remains, as well as from other indications, we gather that we are dealing with the Old Library—that of which we have a fragmentary catalogue, already discussed. On p. 61 this classification ceases, and from that point to the end of the Demonstration follows a list of nearly 300 books given by various donors, some of them very shortly before the time when the catalogue was written.

The second Demonstration is arranged on a definite principle throughout. The books are entered under the names of their donors, and these are placed, roughly speaking, in chronological order. The first name is that of Thomas à Becket, who is followed by his friend Herbert de Bosham, Ralph of Rheims, and Richard “chaplain of St Thomas.” There is then a reversion to Archbishop Lanfranc. Next comes Archbishop Hubert (1193–1207), and then a crowd of miscellaneous monks and archbishops, the latest of the latter class being Robert Winchelsea (1294–1313).

Thus two methods of cataloguing are represented in the document taken as a whole. There is a subject-catalogue carrying us down to the time of Thomas à Becket, and there is a catalogue according to bequests—an acquisition-list—which continues into Prior Eastry’s own time.

We must look somewhat more narrowly at the various portions of this very important inventory, and first we will take the alphabetical catalogue of the Theological books. The fact that it is alphabetical has not hitherto been noticed, but is one that becomes evident the moment that the idea is suggested. Thus, we begin with Augustine, Angelomus, Aldhelm, Ambrose, and so on. On p. 25 we have Boethius, Bruno, Bernard, Bede, Baldwin: then Cassiodorus, and thereafter (p. 27) a break filled chiefly with books of the Bible, glossed and otherwise. On p. 30 the order is resumed with D, and continued to I. Another gap follows, from K to N; then the letters OPRSV are treated. I cannot, in view of his other shortcomings, absolve our scribe from responsibility in the matter of these irregularities.

As to the contents of this part of the collection. A fair proportion of books from it still exists, most of them belonging to the eleventh and twelfth centuries, and written in that script which I have conjecturally associated with the name of Lanfranc. We do not encounter many examples of lost works. Perhaps the most interesting of this class would have been a collection of Homilies made by Hucarius a deacon (Levita) of Cornwall (or Cornouaille). This was evidently an uncommon book: the Praemonstratensian house of Titchfield possessed a copy of it, and this is the only occurrence of the work I have noted outside our catalogue. I shall return later on to the subsequent destinies of the Canterbury copy. Immediately before it the treatise of Irenaeus against Heresies is entered. This volume I believe we do possess, in the Arundel collection. It is a twelfth century manuscript, the earliest but one of our few authorities for the text. Leland notes that Archbishop Simon Meopham presented it to Christ Church, but of this I am doubtful. The catalogue was quite certainly made before Meopham's time, and the Arundel manuscript strikes me as being almost certainly one of the old Christ Church type. It has, indeed, lost its mark; a slip has been cut away just in the place where the books of the old collection were marked. Leland may very easily have read the name Simon as that of the donor and supplied the surname Meopham on his own account. There was more than one early Simon who gave books.

Irenaeus was always rare in England. The Carmelites of Oxford had a copy¹, and that is the only other of which I find any note. It seems most unlikely that Christ Church should have had two copies, one in the old library, and one given by Meopham.

We have already considered the English books. The next division to them is that of the books kept in the Cloister. These constituted a kind of reference library by the help of which the monks could turn spare quarters of an hour to profitable account. Some of the books, too, would be used for the daily reading in the refectory, and others are standard works of reference. An exception heads the list, namely, a Bible kept in the infirmary. Another Bible, and a Psalter, both written by the scribe Eadwin, are the first of the Cloister-books proper. We have, among standard divinity books, Augustine on the Psalms, and on St John, Cassiodorus on the Psalms, Gregory's Moralia, the Sentences, and Prior Aelmer's Sermons. In History, Josephus, Freculphus, Eadmer's Historia Novorum, the Miracles of St Thomas and his Letters. In Science, Pliny, Rabanus, Boethius on Music and Arithmetic. In Law, two copies of the Decreta and a collection of Canons of Councils. Isidore's Etymologiae took the place of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. The Dictionaries of Papias and Hugutio very nearly exhaust the list.

The next important section is the secular collection. I have remarked upon the diminution in the number of books in it which appears when we compare it with the old catalogue. This is attributable partly to wear and tear, and accident, partly, I believe, to carelessness on the part of the scribe. We have to thank him, on the other hand, for a goodly list of medical books.

The miscellaneous donations which fill up the rest of the first Demonstration bring us, as I said, to a time very little anterior to the writing of the catalogue. We have among them, for instance, the Constitutions of Archbishop Peckham (1278-1294). The absence of a Law-class in the earlier part of the list is here compensated for by the occurrence of a very considerable number of books of Civil and Canon Law. The last item of all is a gloss on the sixth book of the Decretals.

So much for the first Demonstration. The second is not easy to discuss at all in detail without involving ourselves in an excess thereof; yet it must be surveyed, in however incomplete a fashion. It begins, as we have seen, with the select and valuable library of St Thomas. Rich in glossed books of the Bible and in Sermons and standard Theology, it contains not a single work by Augustine or Jerome. It has many Law-books for its size; but out of all proportion are its Latin classics. Livy (two volumes), Aulus Gellius, Quintus Curtius, Vegetius, Solinus, Valerius Maximus, Dares Phrygius, Priscian, Donatus, Martianus Capella, Quintilian, Seneca, Martial, form a really magnificent show in a collection of seventy volumes. The reason for this preponderance of ancient literature is not far to seek. I account for it by the supposition that Becket procured these authors by the means and under the advice of John of Salisbury. The last book registered in Becket's bequest is the copy of John's Polycraticus and Metalogicon which is now at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. This, we are pretty safe in assuming, was the author's own present: the Polycraticus, it may be remembered, was dedicated to Becket. No one of that age was a closer student of the Latin classics than John. What is more probable than that he should have communicated his tastes to his friend?

For the rest, this second Demonstration is so mixed in its contents and arrangement as hardly to admit of general characterization. We can derive from it a notion of the trend of studies as time went on. At the end of the period comes in a large contingent of scholastic theology, the gift of Archbishop Winchelsea. Canon Law, too, grows in importance, but little or no trace is to be seen of that revival of Greek and Hebrew learning which Grosseteste and Roger Bacon had initiated in this country in the second half of the thirteenth century. We shall later on note the presence of some of the fruits of that movement, but the catalogue taken by itself would hardly allow us to guess its existence.

Occasionally we get glimpses of the particular tastes of individual donors. A Prior Thomas (p. 122) gives only medical books. William de Refham (p. 123) is specially strong in logic and philosophy. Simon of Leicester (p. 115) is highly legal, and so is Richard de Clive (p. 140). But, as chance will have it, none of these men, and very few in the whole list, are known to fame. Nigellus Wireker, the author of the Speculum Stultorum, whose gifts are enrolled on p. 101, is one of these few.

Many omissions have we already noted on the part of our scribe. There are other gaps for which the document he was copying must be held responsible. It is noteworthy, for example, that in the older nucleus of the Catalogue no Bibles are mentioned. Yet Christ Church must have possessed many ancient Bibles. The probability is that these were kept in the sacristy along with the many textus or Gospel books in precious bindings, and with the multitude of books required for the Church services.

All the indications point very clearly to the fact that this catalogue is but a copy, and a carelessly made one, of a better and fuller document. The catalogue actually in use in the library must have given complete information as to the division of the volumes themselves, as to the Distinctions in which they were kept, and, probably, as to the subdivision of those Distinctions into Gradus or shelves. In the books which still exist we very usually find both the Distinctions and the Gradus noted. A study of these notes serves to show that in most of the Distinctions there were as many as twelve or thirteen Gradus, and that each of these contained but a very few volumes. Thus, in the first Demonstration (p. 22) are entered two copies of the Hexameron of Ambrose. The second of these exists and is marked Dist. II. Gr. VII. After two other volumes we have Opuscula Anselmi maiora (Bodl. 271) marked Dist. II. Gr. VIII. After eight volumes more we come to Epistolae Anselmi maiores (Lambeth, 59) marked Dist. II. Gr. X.

Again, in the second Demonstration I find that a whole Distinction of twelve or thirteen shelves comprised only 35 volumes, another 36, another 42. At this rate the average content of a Gradus would be, in the case of large books, only three or four volumes.

Although there is no known record of a library building at Christ Church before the fifteenth century, when Prior Chillenden and Archbishop Chichele spent large sums on the establishment and adornment of one over the Prior's Chapel, yet the form of Prior Eastry's catalogue, with its division into Demonstrations and Distinctions, irresistibly suggests that the collection must in his time have occupied a special room, of which the two Demonstrations represent the two sides. The Distinctions would be the narrow vertical divisions of these, and each of them would have its numerous subdivisions into Gradus. As the best English equivalent of Demonstratio I would suggest the word "Display," which fairly gives the idea of a wall-surface covered with books; and I figure the building to myself as an enlarged example of those Cistercian book-rooms with which Mr J. W. Clark's researches have familiarized us. It would thus be no place for study, such as the later libraries were, but merely a store-room whence books were fetched to be read at leisure in the cloister.

2 (c). From the Catalogue of Prior Eastry to the Dissolution.

We now enter upon a fresh period, extending from the date of our catalogue (not long after 1300) to the Dissolution (1538). We have not the benefit of such full documentary evidence as heretofore, but the evidence we have is more diversified.

One small accession previous in time to the death of Prior Eastry, but too late to be entered in his catalogue, may head our list. Archbishop Walter Reynold bequeathed in 1327 a Bible in three volumes. The gift is recorded in a Canterbury Register.

Within four years (in 1331) Prior Eastry died, and left eighty volumes to his monastery. Their titles are recorded in the inventory of his goods (MS. E. 27 in the Chapter Library at Canterbury). In subject they are divided between Theology (26), Canon Law (29), Civil Law (14), and Service-books (11). The divinity books are commonplace. Among those on Civil Law are a Bracton, a book of Statutes of England, the "book called Rageman," and four registers relating to Christ Church, the last of which (Memoriale multorum) must, I think, be the manuscript Galba E. IV, containing inter alia the great catalogue that has occupied so much of our time. As a whole the collection is a very unliterary one, that of a man of affairs rather than of a student.

Next comes a document of a new kind. There were periodical inspections of all monastic libraries made with the view of ascertaining what losses had been incurred. The results of one such inspection of the Christ Church books has survived, and has been printed¹. It was made on St Gregory's Day (March 12) 1337. The survey is set forth in a most careful and business-like way.

First come the books which were missing from each of the two Demonstrations, as recorded "in the large tables" (in magnis tabulis). These tables are not, I think, the official catalogue of the library but rather the boards on which it is known that borrowers of books had their names and borrowings recorded; for I find in a St Augustine's manuscript a note, written on the fly-leaf by a monk, of the books "pro quibus scribor in tabula," "for which I am down on the board²." The survey records the name of the donor of each volume, so that well-nigh all of them are identifiable in Eastry's catalogue. The number of books missing is 13 from Demonstration I and 6 from Demonstration II. Next follow the books missing in parvis tabulis. All of these are service-books: 19 are missing. Next the books missing from large and small tables alike, for which deceased monks were responsible. These number 38, of which 28 are service-books.

The arrangement here indicated, by which a special set of boards was reserved for entering the service-books borrowed by monks, is, I believe, not to be paralleled elsewhere. Its chief interest lies in the notion it allows us to form of the size and importance of the liturgical collection in a great monastery in the fourteenth century.

The final section of the survey is interesting because it shows that Christ Church, like other large monasteries, was in the habit of lending books to persons who were not members of it, and even to laymen. The books in the large tables which were in the hands of seculars were 17, and the first defaulting borrower was, of all curious people, King Edward II, who had got the Miracles of St Thomas, and the lives of St Thomas and St Anselm. The remainder, three excepted, are Civil Law books, and most of the borrowers are qualified with the title of Magister. It seems very probable that these were residents at one or other of the Universities.

We have nothing like a complete record of the gifts to the library during this period. There are many books now extant which came in during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, and there are a few records of the acquisition of others¹. Archbishop Simon Meopham (1328-1333) gave some books: two or three are at Trinity College, Cambridge. Archbishop John Stratford (1333-1348) gave at least three, for which a receipt exists. At some time before 1337 Richard de Haute gave some law-books, and in 1357 we have a letter from one who was himself an eminent student and collector of books, Bishop John Grandison of Exeter. He writes, sending a copy of his Life of St Thomas, and expressing in turgid but doubtless sincere terms his admiration for the library of Christ Church. The literary activities of Grandison have yet to be investigated. It will be found by any one who takes the matter in hand that he did wonders for the capitular library of Exeter; and we may look upon him as better qualified to judge of a library than almost any other man of his time.

Dismissing these casual notices, we must turn to the consideration of a great change which passed over the Christ Church library in the fourteenth century. It was an age of rapid growth for the English Universities. Colleges and hostels were being founded in large numbers by individual effort, and the great monasteries, awaking to a sense of their responsibility in the matter of educating their younger members, were, one after another, providing residences at Cambridge or Oxford where they might be sheltered and taught. The contribution of Christ Church to this movement was the founding of Canterbury College in Oxford, an institution which, oddly enough, occupied part of the site of the present Aedes Christi. With the history of this foundation we are to a certain extent concerned, but only so far as regards its library.

It will be remembered that I mentioned some time back a book entered in Prior Eastry's catalogue under the name of the Homilies of Hucarius the Levite of Cornwall. Now Leland in his account of this author¹ tells us that he himself had seen this very volume. It was not then at Canterbury, but at Canterbury College, Oxford, "to which place," he says, "it and almost all the furnishing (supellectile) of the (college) library had been transferred from Canterbury." A moment's thought will show how natural such a proceeding was. Books were a necessity for the monks who were to study at Oxford: what was more obvious than that the mother-house should supply them out of her abundant stores? We have evidence of another case in which this same course was taken. Among the Catalogi Veteres of Durham published by the Surtees Society there is a list of the books transferred from the Priory to Durham College in Oxford.

Here, then, is a momentous episode in the history of our library. A considerable number of its books is drafted off to Oxford, never to return. It seems as if we might give up all hope of tracing what books they were, save in the case of a few which might be supposed to have found their way into Oxford libraries. As a matter of fact the reverse is the case. We do know what the books were, and I am pretty confident that not one of them has survived either at Oxford or anywhere else.

Among the documents in possession of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury is a considerable series relating to Canterbury College. It appears that at the appointment of a new warden of that institution it was the custom to make an inventory of the goods he was to take over from his predecessor. These goods included the books belonging to the College. More than one such inventory is at Canterbury. The fullest of three which all give lists of the books is printed in the present volume from the original roll (dated 1524) which the Dean and Chapter most kindly lent me. The number of the books entered in it is 292, and they are divided in the original into the following classes :

A. Books in the Library.

Theology 1-131.

Canon Law 132-151.

Philosophy 152-192.

B. Books in the great chest in the Warden's Chamber.

Theology 193-221.

Philosophy (with some Canon Law books) 222-292.

Four or five volumes at the end are noted as being printed books.

There is plenty of evidence in the list that the oldest portions of the Christ Church library were not spared when the selection for the Oxford students was made. To begin with, we find (32nd in the list) the Homilies of Hucarius from the old library : and many other volumes can be identified with more or less certainty with books entered in Prior Eastry's Catalogue. Collections, too, which one might have thought too sacred to touch were broken into, for two copies of the Digest which had belonged to St Thomas were packed off. The complexion of the whole is late and scholastic ; yet it is redeemed from mediocrity by a fairly copious sprinkling of quite ancient books.

What became of it? I have, as I said, been unable to find a single book belonging to it, and I am therefore reduced to conjecture. It is likely, on the whole, that the books passed into the possession of Henry VIII's new foundation, though no trace of them is discoverable at Christ Church now. The blood of Hucarius the Levite is, I believe, on the head of the Commissioners sent to reform the Universities in the days of Edward VI. Whole libraries perished before their strenuous efforts both at Oxford and Cambridge. I have no reason to suppose that they showed more mercy to the books of Canterbury College than they did to Duke Humphrey's collections in the Public Library at Oxford, or to the six or seven libraries which they utterly put out of existence at Cambridge. It is difficult to wish that their proceedings should either be forgotten or forgiven.

We are still dealing with the fourteenth century. It was, perhaps, near the middle of that century that the Franciscans in England set on foot a great bibliographical undertaking that included our two Canterbury libraries in its scope. We do not at present know enough of it to be able to trace its history in very close detail. Thus much it will be safe to say; that under the direction of some person or persons whose names have not reached us, particulars of the contents of some 160 monastic libraries in England and Scotland were collected, transmitted to a central bureau, and digested into a single catalogue. The name by which this catalogue is most commonly designated is Tabula septem Custodiarum, that is, the table of the seven custodies or wardenships into which England was divided by the Franciscan order for the purposes of their organization. The libraries examined were arranged in a numbered list under the heads of these seven wardenships. Other names for the same document are Catalogus Angliae, or Registrum librorum Angliae.

In its earliest form it was not an all-embracing work, for it took note of the writings of some eighty-five authors only. In the next century, however, a man was found to undertake a very considerable extension of this plan, namely, John Boston, monk of Bury. His intention evidently was to construct a dictionary of literature, including not only extant works, but also notices of all the lost works he could hear of. I cannot do justice in this place to his design, which was a good deal superior to his achievement. I mention him and his predecessors here because their work serves to some extent as a standard of comparison between the Canterbury libraries and those of other important monasteries in this country. I do not think it gives us any information about the library of Christ Church which we could not gather more conveniently and clearly from the existing catalogues.

No other record of Christ Church library during the fourteenth century is known to me. With the early years of the fifteenth comes our first positive knowledge of a library building. The builder of it was Archbishop Chichele (1414-1443). It was situated over the Prior's Chapel, and was demolished along with that structure at the end of the seventeenth century. Professor Willis has calculated its dimensions and represents the whole building as having been 62 feet long on the north side, 54 feet long on the south side, and 22 feet broad¹. Prior Chillenden is spoken of with Chichele as a benefactor to the library building, but what precise share in the work was due to him we cannot tell. He died in 1411, before the beginning of Chichele's archiepiscopate. Both men contributed books to their monastery, and Chillenden's are known to us, from a list in the Chapter archives, to have numbered 35 volumes, one of which made its way to Canterbury College. They are not remarkable for interest, being all either legal or liturgical. Of Chichele's gifts, said to have been many and valuable, we seem to have no catalogue.

Another small present belonging to the early years of the same century came from Richard Courtenay, Bishop of Norwich, in 1402. It consisted of six volumes, a set of Lyra's commentaries, a Dictionary, and a Milleloquium Augustini, which last is at Trinity College, Cambridge. These had previously belonged to his brother Archbishop William Courtenay, and it was in accordance with the Archbishop's last will that Richard passed them on to the Priory².

William Tilley of Sellinge³, Prior of Christ Church from 1472 to 1494, is the last great name that comes before us in the history of Christ Church library. He is commonly known as William Sellinge (or, as Tanner spells it, Celling), and he is sometimes confused with a contemporary Prior of St Augustine's Abbey who bore the same name. An education at Oxford followed by a residence in Italy had thoroughly imbued him with the love of learning, old and new. His position as Prior of Christ Church enabled him to do much for the cause. He contributed to the furnishing and adornment of the library built by Chichele, and he furnished the southern walk of the cloister with conveniences for study, glazing its windows, and setting up in it carrells or wooden studies for the use of the brethren. He did more than this. While in Italy he took pains to possess himself of all the books he could, both in Greek and Latin, and the collection he brought back with him to England is said to have been large and very precious. No doubt it was his intention that his accumulations should ultimately become the property of his monastery and take their place on the shelves of its common library. This was not to be. For some unknown reason—perhaps lack of space—they remained in the Prior's lodging long after his death. They were still there when in the year preceding the Dissolution, Dr Leighton or Layton, one of the most notorious of the Commissioners for the Reform of the monasteries, paid an unwelcome official visit to Christ Church. His servants got drunk (says Leland) or there was a regrettable accident (says Layton)—in any case fire broke out in the Prior's lodging and Sellinge's books were consumed. Leland's assertion that a copy of Cicero's De Republica perished on this occasion has often been repeated, but does not command universal acceptance. After harrowing our feelings by the statement, he gives us a grain of comfort by telling us that a few books which had been lent out escaped, including a copy of St Basil on Isaiah, presumably in Greek.

³ Kent possesses two villages of this name, now distinguished as Selling and Sellindge (or Sellinge): at which of these William was born I know not.

This is all we know of Sellinge's books, but it is a probable if not more than probable conjecture that most of the manuscripts which Parker supposed to have been Theodore's, were in reality among those brought back by this Prior from Italy. They are all of late date and foreign origin, in several cases unmistakably Italian.

Sellinge's death brings us to the threshold of the sixteenth century. It would be pleasant to be able to trace the influence of the new learning which he at least made accessible to his monks, and to point to some increased literary activity to which it gave birth at Canterbury; but any attempt to do so would lead me into the department of imaginative fiction. It was not, I think, the habit of those who had been caught by the spirit of the Revival, to enter monasteries or to remain in them save under compulsion. The Canterbury monks of 1500 have left us Bell Harry, the noblest Gothic tower in existence, and though that legacy may not be precisely what some would have asked of them, it goes far to satisfy me for the dearth of literary output.

Still, Sellinge had one protégé who carried on his work with good effect in a wider sphere than the Priory could have afforded him. This was Thomas Linacre, of whose career and exploits there is no need to speak here. It will be enough to remind my readers that he was a native of Canterbury and that Sellinge took him to Italy and introduced him to Politian.

A list of seventeen books given by Prior Thomas Goldstone to Prior Thomas Goldwell about 1500 (see p. 498), deserves mention at this point. It is not clear whether they ever became part of the conventual library. Half-a-dozen of the titles suggest that the owner was in touch with the Renaissance movement.

The last document which deals at all systematically with our library has now to be produced¹. Mr J. W. Clark first drew attention to it in a paper from which I have derived much help; but neither he nor anyone else has hitherto had occasion to print the text in full. In form this document reminds us of the Defectus librorum of 1337, but it is far more extensive and valuable a record. It is a list of the books which were repaired in the year 1508, drawn up by an industrious official named William Ingram, whose post was that of custos martyrii or warden of the "Martyrdom," the place where St Thomas suffered death. Mr Clark has utilized the list most ingeniously and successfully for the reconstruction of the internal arrangements of the library, and is able to show that the book-cases were sixteen in number, eight on each side of the room, and that each contained four shelves. What has made it possible to set forth these matters in such detail is the admirable care and orderliness of Ingram's work. He goes through each book-case, shelf by shelf, and records on which side of the library each stood. This particularity makes his survey a most valuable authority for the topography of the building. It is not less valuable for the study of the contents of the library. Ample means are given for the identification of the volumes by the quotations of the opening words of the second leaf; and the number of volumes thus described is satisfactorily large, reaching a total of 300. What proportion the books that needed repair bore to the rest of the collection we cannot tell, so that Ingram gives us no help towards estimating its growth since Prior Eastry's days. Perhaps, having raised this question, I had better say what has to be said about it before examining Ingram's records in detail. Mr Clark puts the matter very shortly and clearly¹. Having established the number of book-cases as sixteen he assigns to them conjecturally eight feet in length and two in depth. Each had two shelves on each side or 32 feet of shelving in all; in the 16 cases together there would be 512 feet. Prior Eastry's Catalogue enumerates 1850 volumes. "If we allow $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet for every ten of these, we shall require $462\frac{1}{2}$ feet: or in other words, we can arrange the whole collection in 14 stalls, leaving two over for the additions which must have been made in the interval between the middle of the 14th century and the date of Brother Ingram's researches." Two cases contain 64 feet of shelving, which would accommodate rather over 250 books. Say that out of the 1850 books something like 150 were sent to Oxford, and that another 100 were lost. That would give space for 500 volumes. We know of two donations (Eastry's and Chillenden's) which together amounted to over 100 volumes, and we have seen that there are records of smaller gifts. It is clear that there cannot have been much room to spare in the library in 1508, and my conjecture that lack of space prevented Prior Sellinge's books from being bestowed there appears to be well-grounded. If the collection had increased at the same rate between 1330 and 1500 as it did between 1170 and 1330, there would certainly have been no room for it in the library, much less for any such large accretion as the Prior had brought with him from Italy.

Not only is Ingram's survey useful in giving us a list of volumes that were in the library in 1508: it gives us besides a clear idea of their arrangement. They were disposed in the sixteen book-cases according to subject, and the subjects were arranged as follows:

On the north side, beginning from the west,

The old arrangement in Demonstrations and Distinctions is thus quite swept away; but in one or two cases Ingram adds the words “de prima” or “de secunda demonstratione” to the title of the book, and in two cases he substitutes it for the title. Out of the 300 volumes which he enumerates I have been able to identify just about one half as now extant.

One more glimpse at the library is vouchsafed to us before the Dissolution, in the pages of Leland’s Collectanea (IV. 10)¹. He has but jotted down the names of a few books that interested him because they were rare and old or were the work of English authors. This of course is his usual method. In too many cases (notably in the large edition of Dugdale’s Monasticon) the meagre lists of books which Leland has noted as existing in the various monasteries have been represented as catalogues of their whole libraries. It is as well to keep this fact in mind when one is using the Monasticon or the numerous authors who have copied it. The student of Leland himself can hardly fail to see the true state of the case.

Of the Christ Church library he records that he saw there works by Archbishop Baldwin, Aelred of Rievaulx, Johannes Wallensis, Bede, Hilary, Isidore, Stephen Langton, and Nigellus. He then mentions two Greek volumes, one containing Job, “Solomon” (i.e. the Sapiential books), Isaiah, and Jeremiah, the other the Psalter. Then he notes the book “Richaleon” or Pictaleon, which he describes as a versification of Alcuin’s tract addressed to Guido, and lastly the manuscript of Irenaeus, which, as we saw, he asserts to have been given by Archbishop Simon Meopham.

He had also studied with attention the catalogue of Prior de Estria in Galba E IV: certain marks which occur in that manuscript I am inclined to attribute to his hand. In the Commentarii de Scriptoribus Britannicis he refers to it several times under the name of the "Index"; and he also speaks of the library itself. Thus in c. 1 he says that the Index mentions a copy of the "Dicta Aquilae." In c. 31 is his reference to Hucarius, already discussed. In c. 180 (Odo) the Index is again mentioned. In c. 182 is the interesting statement that William Gillingham, a Christ Church monk, had written an account of either Benedictine authors or Canterbury authors, and that a copy of this was to be seen on a series of "tables" hung up on the north side of the choir of Christ Church. In cc. 183 (Aluredus), 212 (Ricardus Pluto), 257 (Arturius) are further references to books in the Index or in the library. And lastly, in c. 590 we have the tragic account of the destruction of William Selling's precious collection.

At this point we will leave the history of the library of Christ Church, and take up that of the library of St Augustine's Abbey. The destinies of both, after their dispersion, shall be treated simultaneously.

B. THE ABBEY OF ST AUGUSTINE.

In tracing the history of the library of Christ Church we had a fairly long series of documents to guide us. Catalogues, complete or fragmentary, were forthcoming which told us of its condition during each century from the twelfth to the sixteenth. For the investigation upon which we are now to embark we are far worse equipped. There is but one catalogue of the library of St Augustine's Abbey¹, and that is of late date. Under these circumstances I may be permitted to vary the method I have hitherto employed. Instead of plotting out the history into periods I will begin by describing the catalogue, and will thus deal with the history of the library as best I can.

¹ In Thorne's Chronicle are a few notices of books given to the abbey. They will be given where they seem suitable. There is one which cannot conveniently be introduced elsewhere, viz. p. 2196, Thomas Ichani sacrist bequeaths a summa praedicantium value 8 marks.

1. The Catalogue.

The catalogue, which has never yet been printed, has been preserved to us in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin. I am deeply indebted to the Provost and Fellows of that great College for sending the manuscript to the University Library at Cambridge and thus enabling me to examine it at leisure and to have a transcript of it made by the skilful hand of Mr A. Rogers. The book is a small folio volume of paper written late in the fifteenth century mainly by two scribes. It was given to Trinity College by Archbishop Ussher. Of its previous history I can only be sure that it belonged in the sixteenth century to Dr John Dee, the famous alchemist. In the catalogue of his manuscripts¹, no. 128 is "Matricula siue catalogus bibliothecae Cantuariensis, papyro folio."

Dr Dee possessed a surprisingly large number of manuscripts from St Augustine's Abbey, and, furthermore, several of his books are now at Trinity College, Dublin. The catalogue on which we are engaged was, I cannot doubt, identical with that which he possessed.

The contents of the volume are :

1. Twelve leaves containing a register of the books in the library and of those out on loan (p. 173). This will not come under our consideration just yet.
2. Fourteen leaves containing an alphabetical index of the treatises in the library (p. 196). This I have not included in my edition, for it adds nothing to our knowledge of the books or of their contents. Moreover, it is unfinished : the numerals which should have given a complete indication of the whereabouts of each treatise have not been added in the majority of cases.
3. One hundred and thirty-one pages, containing the catalogue proper (p. 196).

¹ Ed. by J. O. Halliwell for the Camden Society. Diary of Dr John Dee, 1842, pp. 65 sqq.

Only two detailed notices of this volume are known to me. Sir Frederick Madden first called attention to it in a short article in *Notes and Queries*¹. He identified it as belonging to St Augustine's. Gottlieb in his excellent volume Ueber Mittelalterliche Bibliotheken (p. 159) gives an account derived entirely from Madden's article.

The first point we have to determine is the date of our record. That it belongs to a late period in the fifteenth century we can tell at once by the writing: but a date somewhat more precise can, I think, be safely given. One book, a Correctorium Bibliae, is entered as the gift of John Preston. This book now exists, in the Cathedral Library at Canterbury, and in it is a note of the gift signed by Clement Canterbury, and dated 1491. This Clement Canterbury appears as a member of the Society in the register prefixed to the catalogue, and from a Bible (Brit. Mus. Burney 11) we learn that in 1473 he was "monachus et scholaris" of the Abbey. The catalogue was made, then, after 1491. The same preliminary register contains a few other names which have a bearing on the question of date. One is John Dygon. There were two men of this name; one was Abbot from 1497 to 1509, the other was Prior at the time of the Dissolution. It seems almost certain that the first John Dygon is the one in the register, and that he was not yet Abbot: this dates the register between 1491 and 1497. Another is Thomas Hampton. He succeeded Abbot Dygon in 1509. The Prior at the time is W. Shrewsbury; the Abbot appears simply as dominus abbas.

On the whole I think we are justified in placing the date of the catalogue at some time shortly before 1497. The moment chosen is a fortunate one, for the library must then have been at its fullest.

The method of its disposition must next be described. To put it shortly, it is a subject-catalogue, and a very good specimen of its kind. Stated in the broadest way the classification is as follows:

1. Bibles, Glosses, Concordances, and the like.
2. Patristic and scholastic writers on Divinity.
Sermons. Books of Devotion. Ascetic Theology.
3. Natural History.
4. History and Biography.
5. Philosophy.
6. Music.
7. Geometry.
8. Astronomy.
9. Medicine.
10. Logic.
11. Grammar.
12. Poetry.
13. Books in French and English.
14. Alchemy.
15. Books of Miscellaneous Collections.
16. Canon Law.

One omission will be noticed. There are no books on Civil Law in the catalogue, though one or two exist which belonged to the library, and though we have notices in Thorne's Chronicle of two gifts of such books to the Abbey¹. There is no sign of mutilation in the volume, and I look upon it as being in this respect unfinished.

The cataloguer's method is an excellent one, full and uniform. He gives the following pieces of information in this order :

- a.* General title or title of the first treatise in the volume.
- b.* Name of donor.

¹ Thorne, p. 1922. Idem magister Hamo (Doge, Rector of Snaves) contulit huic ecclesie Bibliam pulchram (no. 15 in the Catalogue) et totum corpus iuris operatu (apparatu) ordinario glosatum ; p. 2037 Will of Peter de Dene, 1322 : In primis decreta mea in vitulinio scriptas in asseribus nigro coreo coopertis. Item decretales in vitulinio in corio ligatas (no. 1635). Item apparatus domini Hostiensis supra decretalibus in duobus voluminibus (?no. 1803). Item apparatus domini Innocentii in asseribus. Item Rosarium guidonis super decretalibus. Item apparatus super sextum cum repertorio Guillelmi Surandi (Durandi) in uno vol. in coreo. Item apparatus domini Iohannis monachi cum apparatu Iohannis Andreæ in uno vol. in coreo. Item quinque volumina iuris civilis in corio ligata, videlicet, Digestum vetus, inforciatum, Digestum novum, Codicem, et parvum volumen, monasterio S. Aug. Cant. do lego etc.

- c. Other contents of the volume.
- d. First words of second leaf.
- e. Press-mark.

But what particularly distinguishes him from other mediæval cataloguers is his system of cross-references. Say that we have a book containing Augustine de Trinitate and de doctrina Christiana. The full description is given under Augustine de Trinitate. When we come to the heading Augustinus de doctrina Christiana we read: "Aug. de doct. Chr. non hic quia infra (or supra) in Aug. de Trin. cum A."; and this formula is repeated for every copy of the tract in question. In the instance I have chosen it occurs six times. The plan is laborious, but perspicuous. It has the great merit of showing at a glance how many copies of any given tract there were in the library. In printing the text I have ventured to omit the words non hic quia and the title (where it occurs more than once), and so gain a certain amount of space.

We have seen one reason for believing that the catalogue is not a finished work as it stands. This belief is confirmed when we come to examine the record of the press-marks. These have been very capriciously inserted and omitted, besides which, one often comes across books which undoubtedly belonged to the library and yet do not appear in the catalogue. Yet in spite of its unfinished state there is enough in the record to give us some notion of the arrangement of the collection. The press-marks consist here as at Christ Church of the number of the Distinctio and Gradus (book-case and shelf) in which the volume stood. I find mention of Distinctions numbered from I to XIV, once of a XVth and once of a XVIth: of a XVth there seems to be no trace. This may be accidental, or else it may be that the XVth case held the Civil Law books of which we have no record. Yet another possibility is this. We find frequent reference to a case called *Distinctio Thome Abbatis*¹. This appears to have been one in which the books given by Abbot Thomas Findon (1283-1309) or Abbot Thomas Poncyn (1334-1343) were kept as a separate collection. This "class" seems to have had its separate catalogue, if one may judge from a single mention of a Matricula Thome Abbatis. I regard it as possible that Abbot Thomas's books may have filled our missing XVth Distinction, while for the Civil Law books we may assume the existence of an XVIIIth.

Eighteen cases seem to be the most we are justified in postulating. As to the number of gradus or shelves in each, we never find it exceeding six, while it is clear that in many cases it fell short of this figure. The first few Distinctions, those that contained the large Bibles and glosses, show no more than three or four. It is when we come to the poets and such small fry that the number of shelves increases.

These details may be made to throw some light on the character of the room in which the books were kept. We may regard it as certain that at this time the Abbey possessed a special library building. Precedents such as those which Mr J. W. Clark has collected in large numbers lead us to imagine a long, narrow room, entered probably from the end (for it seems likely that the number of book-cases on each side were equal), lighted by frequent small windows and having on either side nine book-cases projecting from the wall. These cases would be of the form figured by Mr Clark on p. 193 of his Care of Books. The main component parts of each would be a sloping desk for the reader, a row of books below it and two or more shelves above it. But there is a difficulty. It is unfortunate for our conjectural reconstruction that neither history nor tradition can be induced to tell us where the library of the Abbey was situated. In default of evidence, I should be disposed to guess that it was over the cloister on the side next to the Church. In that case it could only have windows on one side, and the books on the inner wall, next the Church, would be badly lighted. The only other available side of the Cloister would be the western, where a double light would be attainable: but this was not a common position for a monastic library.

If then it should appear that the library was next to the Church, I must think it probable that it had book-cases on one side only, that, namely, which looked on to the Cloister, and that it was long enough to contain eighteen cases. This is really not very much to ask. If a case and window together occupied six feet, the total length of the room need not have exceeded 110 feet. The total length of St Augustine's Cloister from East to West was 141 feet.

I had written these sentences before the publication of that very useful book, St Augustine's Monastery, Canterbury, by the Rev. R. J. E. Boggis, B.D., Subwarden of St Augustine's College. From his account (p. 161) it appears that the existence of any upper story of building over the cloisters is very doubtful: certainly the cloisters were not vaulted in stone. This fact does not absolutely preclude the possibility of an upper story, and I therefore let my conjecture stand. Mr Boggis himself suggests that one of the chambers under the dormitory may have been used as the library. I do not myself think this very probable, in view of the lack of any precedent in English Benedictine houses. What is abundantly clear is that at present no certainty can be attained on the point.

My reckoning of the whole number of books entered in the catalogue—allowing for a few which have been described twice over—makes them about 1830. If we allow further a margin of 70 for Civil Law books and for extant volumes omitted in the catalogue we reach a total of about 1900. Thus at the end of the fifteenth century St Augustine's possessed only a few more books than did Christ Church at the beginning of the fourteenth. If a reason for this disparity be required, I think it is forthcoming. The Chronicle called William Thorne's¹ tells us of a great fire which devastated the Abbey in 1168 during the abbacy of the intruder Clarembald. His words have been taken to mean that a great mass of ancient books perished at that time; but the actual terms used, "in qua combustionem multae codicellae antiquae perierunt," refer, I now think, in the first instance, to charters and other such documents¹. However, it is only too likely that the library suffered severely as well as the archives, and that it never recovered from this disaster. As a matter of fact I think it will be found that there is a smaller proportion, among the extant books, of eleventh and twelfth century manuscripts than we should have expected.

A few words as to the preliminary register. It is a striking fact that the number of volumes marked as being either in the library, cloister, or vestry, or in the hands of members of the house falls far short of the number of those entered in the catalogue. It amounts to only 789 as against 1837 entries. The truth is, I suppose, that the record is an unfinished one. At any rate the last 14 columns contain only 4 entries, and in others of the later leaves the bulk of the books entered in the catalogue (some of which we now have) are passed over without any sort of notice. Incomplete as it is, however, the record seems to be unique in kind among English documents. It approaches most nearly to the Defectus librorum of Christ Church, printed at p. 146. Incidentally, as has been shown, it gives us some help in determining the date of the catalogue.

The reader has now been put in possession of the chief facts concerning the character and contents of our catalogue, and I may proceed to such a chronological survey of the history of the library as our records will allow.

2. The Earliest Books.

I observed in a previous page that the books traditionally connected with Augustine the Apostle of the English were all at his Abbey and not at Christ Church. It is well known, in fact, that in the unfinished history of St Augustine's by Thomas of Elmham we have a very elaborate account of the volumes to which a Gregorian or Augustinian origin was attributed in the fifteenth century. I will in this place give an English rendering of the most important parts of this passage, condensing those portions which are of less moment, and interlarding the whole with my own comments¹.

Of the Books.

(1) "First, there is in the library the Bible of St Gregory² (Biblia Gregoriana) in two volumes, whereof the first has a rubric on its first leaf, Of the Chapters of the Book Genesis.

"The second volume begins with the prologue of St Jerome upon the Prophet Isaiah.

"At the beginnings of the books in these volumes are inserted certain leaves, of which some are purple, others of rose colour. These when held up to the light give a wonderful reflection."

The first item in our catalogue is a description of this Bible (which, by the way, is marked in the preliminary register as being then kept in the vestry). It runs thus:

"The first part of the Bible of St Gregory. Second leaf, on the prologue, begins in doctrina. Dist. I. Gr. 1.

Second part of the Bible of St Gregory. Second leaf, non feram. Dist. I. Gr. 1."

Humphrey Wanley³ quotes a petition of the Roman Catholic laity to James I, which refers to the Bible of St Gregory as being in existence: and it has been usual in modern times to identify this Bible with that marked I. E. viij, I. E. viij among the Royal MSS. in the British Museum. However, the Royal MS. has lost its purple leaves, if it ever had them, and its second leaf does not begin with the words specified in the catalogue.

³ Thes. Ling. Sept. II. 172.

More plausible is the view (first advanced, I think, by Professor Westwood) which sees in another book in the same collection (I. E. VI) a fragment of this Bible. The volume in question now contains only the Gospels; but its quires are numbered from LXXX to LXXXVIII, so that it must originally have contained a great deal more, most probably the whole Bible. It is of the eighth century, written in a beautiful round minuscule, it does contain some leaves of purple vellum, and it did belong to St Augustine's Abbey. Its pressmark, however, is not Dist. I. Gr. 1, as it ought to be if it were St Gregory's Bible, but Dist. III. Gr. 3, indicating that it was kept along with other copies of the Gospels. I do not find it in our catalogue at all.

(2) "There is, further, in the same library, the Psalter of St Augustine, which the said Gregory sent to him, on the first leaf of which begin certain Meditations: Ecce quantum spatiatum sum, etc. up to f. 5, where begins omnis scriptura, etc.

On the verso of the leaf is the Creed, Lord's Prayer, Gloria in Excelsis, Sanctus, etc.

On f. 6 begins the Psalter.

At the end are Hymns." A list is then given, beginning Mediæ noctis tempus est.

(3) "There is also in the vestry a text of the Gospels, at the beginning of which the ten (Eusebian) Canons are entered and it is called the Text of St Mildred, because a countryman in Thanet swore falsely upon it, and, it is said, lost his eyes."

(4) "There is, besides, another Psalter, placed upon the table of the High Altar, which has outside it an image of Christ and of the four evangelists in plain silver" (that is, I suppose, incised on a plate, not in relief). The first leaf of the Psalter begins Omnis scriptura.

On f. 3 is Epistola Damasi papae ad Jeronimum.

Versus Damasi.

Epistola Jeronymi ad Damasum.

Versus Hieronymi.

On f. 4. De origine Psalmorum, dividing the Psalter into five books (which are then enumerated).

On f. 5. Exposition of Alleluia. Note on Gloria. Explanation of Ps. cxviii (cxix).

On f. 6. Quando psalli uel legi debeat, quomodo Hieronymus scribit.

Alphabetical order of the Psalms.

On f. 7. On the Hebrew letters.

On ff. 8—11. Interpretation of the Psalms.

On f. 11. Text of the Psalms with a picture of Samuel the priest (more probably David).

At the end, Hymns, as in the Psalter before mentioned."

There is, I am afraid, no book in existence which is even supposed to be the Text of St Mildred: but there is a claimant for the position of one of the two Psalters, in the Cottonian MS. Vespasian A. 1. It contains Jerome's 'Roman' version of the Psalms, which points to an original connexion with Rome. This version is the one which Augustine would have been in the habit of using. On the other hand, it is not of the age of Augustine, for it is generally allowed to be of the eighth century. There is an interlinear Anglo-Saxon version of the Psalms, and Professor Sweet in his Oldest English Texts shows that this is in the Mercian dialect¹. Professor Skeat has pointed out to me that this need not mean that the book was ever removed into Mercia: and that it is by no means to be taken for granted that books written at Canterbury would exhibit a Kentish dialect. The presence of a Mercian monk at Canterbury, or the hypothesis that this gloss is transcribed from another book, would, I suppose, account for its linguistic form. At any rate the preliminary matter coincides exactly with that noticed by Elmham as occurring in the second of the two Psalters he describes; and with that second Psalter we may very confidently identify it, as Westwood did, and as others since his time have done. Probably the truth of the matter is that the book was copied from a real Gregorian Psalter for which it was substituted, and with which, in course of time, it came to be confused.

¹ The charter of Ethelbald of Mercia, now marked Augustus II. 2, was once in this volume: a further indication of Mercian connexion.

(5) "Also in the library there is another text of the Gospels to which the ten Canons are prefixed, with a prologue beginning Prologus Canonum."

This may very well be the volume I. E. VI, of which something was said above, or else the Corpus Christi MS. no. 286.

The other books enumerated by Elmham are :

(6) Passions of the Apostles.

(7) Passions of Saints, beginning with St Apollinaris and ending with SS. Simplicius, Faustinus, and Beatrix.

(8) Expositions of the Epistles and Gospels from the 3rd Sunday after the Octave of Easter to the 4th Sunday after the Octave of Pentecost.

All these were in splendid bindings and lay on the High Altar.

No attempt has ever been made, so far as I know, to show that any of them still exist, and I have no suggestion to offer on the point.

Besides the books described by Elmham, certain others still survive which have commonly been assigned to the Augustinian period. They are all Gospel books, more or less complete. Two are among Archbishop Parker's Manuscripts at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (no. 197 and no. 286), another is in the British Museum (Cotton MS. Otho C. v), and the last is in the Bodleian (Auct. D. II. 14).

No. 286 at Corpus Christi is the well-known uncial MS. with two pictured pages. The fact that it comes from St Augustine's is well attested by the presence in it of various charters and donations relating to the Abbey. It seems curious that Elmham should not have noticed it: possibly it may be identical with the Text of St Mildred or with no. 5 in Elmham's list. The date of it is now generally fixed as the seventh century, and, though it can hardly have belonged to Augustine, there is nothing to prevent us from supposing it to have been brought to England by some such person as Abbot Hadrian¹, the contemporary of Theodore of Tarsus. All the preliminary matter is now lost, and this makes a clear identification with any book in Elmham's list impossible.

No. 197 and Otho C. v may be taken together. Each of them is a fragmentary copy of the Gospels in a noble Celtic hand. The Corpus Christi fragment has portions of St John and St Luke, the other of St Matthew and St Mark. It has often been conjectured that the two originally formed a single volume, but this must not be pressed. Sir E. Maunde Thompson, in the Catalogue of Ancient MSS. in the British Museum (Latin MSS.), describes the two books as being dissimilar. The Canterbury origin of no. 197 is attested by a note emanating from Parker: that of Otho C. v is deduced from its similarity to the Corpus Christi fragment. Together with many other books in the cases Otho and Vitellius it suffered grievously in the fire of 1731. Fragments of some sixty leaves only now remain. Bishop Tanner asserts, we know not on what authority, that no. 197 was a portion of the Gospels of St Felix the Apostle of East Anglia, otherwise called the Red Book of Eye. This attribution I have discussed in another place¹. For the present I prefer to trust to Parker's note in the manuscript itself, which at least indicates, I think, that he acquired it at Canterbury.

The Bodleian manuscript, presented by Sir Robert Cotton in 1603, has been classed with, and thought to resemble, no. 286 at Corpus Christi. It is written in uncials, but lacks those paintings which give a special interest to the latter. In deference to the views of previous writers I include it in my list of Augustinian MSS., but I do not myself believe that it comes from Canterbury. Mr F. Madan speaks very decidedly of its unlikeness to no. 286. There is moreover on its last leaf a list in Anglo-Saxon of books belonging to an abbey, and in the possession of various members thereof. Among these is named "Baldwin (Bealdepuine) Abbas." No Baldwin was ever Abbot of St Augustine's: but there was a Baldwin who died Abbot of Bury St Edmund's in 1098, and Mr Macray has suggested with great probability² that he may be the person meant here. Baldwin of Bury came from the Abbey of St Denis, and may perhaps have brought this—which is a foreign book—with him.

² Annals of the Bodleian Library, ed. 2, p. 30.

Of all these manuscripts, then, one only—no. 286 at Corpus Christi—has been in England and at Canterbury from a time approaching that of St Augustine.

We have to pass on to the tenth century before another record becomes available. The Cottonian MS. Domitian VIII consists of two books from St Augustine's, bound together. One is an early Isidore with other tracts, another a Giraldus Cambrensis. On a leaf of the Isidore is an Anglo-Saxon list of books given to the Abbey by King Athelstan, nine or less in number; two more are mentioned as belonging to a priest named Alfwold. Athelstan's gifts were these: Isidore de naturis rerum, Persius, Bede (?) de arte metrica, and some excerpts on the same subject, Donatus major and minor, the Apocalypse, Alcuin, a gloss on Cato's Distichs, a grammatical treatise, Sedulius. A mutilated title follows. Of all these only the Isidore, I believe, survives¹.

Few other early gifts are traceable. Thorne (p. 1784) tells us that archbishop Eadsin gave the abbey a Psalter "glossed with the lesser gloss."

I know of no more early gifts. The structure of our catalogue is not such as to allow us to trace the gradual growth of the collection, nor do we find among the names of the donors any that carry us back to a time obviously before the twelfth century. It is a fair conjecture that those donors who have but a plain Christian name are earlier in date than those who possess in addition a surname or place-name. To this earlier class would belong Eudo, Haymo, Jacobus, Jambert, Jerome the succentor, Radulphus, Salomon, Wybert, his syndon ðea bec þe æþelstanes waeran. de natura rerum. persius. de arte metrica. donatum minorem. Excerptiones de metrica arte. Apocalipsin. donatum maiorem. alchuinum. glossam super catonem. libellum de grammatica arte que sic incipit. terra que pars. sedulium i. gerim. paes alfpoldes preostes. Glossa super donatum. dialogorum.

See Gottlieb, p. 278.

and Yvo, most of whom I should assign to the Norman period.

Turning from the donors to the books themselves, I at least do not gain much help towards the construction of a history. Some early manuscripts there are—none earlier than the eighth century—but they have no mark to show who gave them¹. Among them are a glossary at Corpus Christi (no. 144), Lambeth 414, which contains with other patristic tracts Victorinus de fabrica mundi, Bodley 426 (Philippus Presbyter on Job), Cambridge University Library Gg. 5. 35, a miscellany including Juvenius and the famous early German poems known as the Carmina Cantabrigiensia. An unlucky slip of the cataloguer has deprived us of a full description of this volume: one or two cross-references only remain showing that it was denominated "Collectiones cum A." We cannot, then, tell at what date these various books came into the abbey library, but I am inclined to believe that absence of a donor's name is an indication that, if not written in the monastery, the volumes had been there so long that the donor's name had been forgotten. There is a manuscript of early date (cent. x: Trin. Coll. Camb. R. 15. 14) which is duly entered in the catalogue as the gift of William of Clare, who lived in cent. XIII–XIV. This I cite as tending to confirm my belief that if the donors of other ancient books had been remembered, they would in like manner have been recorded.

I believe that—like Christ Church—St Augustine's possessed in early times a characteristic school of handwriting. Compare the script of the Royal MS. I. E. vii with that of the Missal at Corpus Christi (no. 270)². These books, separated by three centuries in date, are books written in fine minuscules of which the prevailing characteristic is roundness. I venture to add to the list the Harley MS. 603 and to regard it as a St Augustine's book. It is, as may be remembered, a Psalter of the tenth century illustrated with drawings which are derived from the Utrecht Psalter. That the Utrecht Psalter was at Christ Church in the XIIIth century and was there copied by the scribe Eadwine is generally allowed. The Harleian MS., an earlier and somewhat freer copy, shows in its text a form of minuscule which seems to me indubitably connected with the brand of the Missal. There is also at the Bodleian a single leaf of a Gospel book in a magnificent round minuscule, which the librarian assigns to St Augustine's Abbey: and it is probable that other manuscripts may be identified in the future as productions of the same scriptorium. But the evidence for the St Augustine script is as yet not nearly so abundant as for that of Christ Church.

² Compare again with these the Lectiones de S. Lethardo in Royal MS. 5. B. xv, and the concluding pages of Harley 652, which contain a life of Abbot Adrian: both Lethard and Adrian are specially connected with our Abbey. Another example of this hand is to be seen in some scholia on Juvenal (Trinity College, Cambridge, O. 4. 11) which can be traced to the same library.

3. The Donors of Books.

The most considerable benefactors to the library belong, as might be expected, to the XIIIth, XIVth, and XVth centuries. To most of them it is impossible to assign a precise date, for we have no such wealth of records of the personnel of St Augustine's Abbey as we have in the case of Christ Church. Even the list of Priors is far from complete. In many cases the actual volumes given by this or that monk, where they exist, afford the only sure evidence as to how early or how late we may place him. In spite of this dearth of precise information we may usefully enumerate here the most important donors and review the character of their gifts. We will take the Abbots first.

Nicolas Thorn (1272-1283) occurs twelve times in our record. He gave a Bible, corrected at Paris, no doubt according to the Dominican correction so severely condemned by Roger Bacon. The rest of his gifts are of the commonest kind, Sermons, books of Scholastic Theology and Canon Law, and the vocabularies of Hugutio and Brito.

Thomas Findon his successor (1283-1309) is the most liberal of all the Abbots. I have noted the fact that there was a special class in the library entitled "Distinctio Thomae Abbatis," containing the gifts of an Abbot Thomas, and I believe that Findon is the Abbot in question. There is, however, room for doubt. Four Abbots Thomas ruled St Augustine's at different periods, and three of them contributed to its library. The first was Findon (1283-1309), the second Poncyn (1334-1343), the third Hunden (1405-1419). The last, Hampton, who succeeded in 1509, does not come into consideration.

In the large majority of cases (over 100) the catalogue records the books we are discussing as having come simply from "Abbot Thomas." Very occasionally we have the name of Abbot Thomas "the First," rather oftener that of Thomas "the Second," never that of Thomas "the Third." In eight cases the name Thomas Findon is given, in seven the name Thomas Poncyn, in ten Thomas Hunden. The surviving books do not settle the question of identity, and we are reduced to negative evidence and the balancing of probabilities. No book which certainly came from either Poncyn or Hunden is ever assigned to the special book-case of Abbot Thomas: again, Findon was Abbot for 26 years, Poncyn for nine only. Had Poncyn been the giver of the books in question, would not the class which contained them probably have been called "Distinctio Thomae Abbatis secundi"?

I do not profess to be certain on the point, but provision-

¹ Another argument in favour of Findon is that adduced by Mr Boggis (l. c. p. 187) who points out that Findon was the Abbot who in 1307 instituted a service in commemoration of the benefactors of the library. Thorne is our authority for this; on p. 2008 he says:

"This Lord Thomas, with the unanimous consent of the brethren, ordained that every year for ever in the beginning of Lent on the day when the library is brought into the chapter house (die qua librarium deferitur in capitulum: compare Lanfranc's Statute) the souls of those living should be commended (to God) and the souls of those deceased should be absolved, by whom the library (librarium) of this Church has been in any way improved; and that for the living a mass of the Holy Ghost should be solemnly celebrated as soon as it conveniently may, in presence of the convent (in conventu), and another for the dead with the prayer Inclina and those that follow."

ally I incline to regard Findon as the donor of such books as are entered to the credit of Abbot Thomas. They number 104, to which I add the ten which are definitely assigned to Findon. Almost all subjects are represented in the list, but that list is not sufficiently characteristic to be worth analysing in detail. Its length is the chief point that calls for remark.

Not more noteworthy are the gifts of Poncyn or Hunden, or those of William Welde (1389-1405), save that Hunden and Welde both show a partiality for Canon Law.

The last Abbot who figures in the catalogue is George Penshurst (in 1450): he gives a volume of Latin verse.

Among Priors, one Thomas (possibly Findon again) is the most conspicuous: the character of his gifts leads me to place him late in the XIIIth century. On the same evidence I should assign a rather earlier date to the sub-prior Adam. One of his books was a copy of Malchus, a twelfth century poem by Reginald of Canterbury.

The ordinary monks, of course, furnish forth the bulk of the list. Several of these are deserving of being singled out for the quantity and several for the quality of their contributions. A good example of the latter class is Thomas Arnold. The list of the books he gave is not too long to be quoted in full. They were:

1. Guido de Colonna's History of the Trojan War.
2. The Chronicle of Marianus Scotus.
3. The Polychronicon of Ranulph Higden. This still exists, and in an initial at the beginning is a picture of Thomas Arnold (as a monk) and of his patron St Katherine.
4. Guy of Warwick, Ypomedon, and other romances in French.
5. Quatre fils Aymon in French.
6. A French book, the title not given.
7. Launcelot.
8. The Graal.
9. Per le Galois.
10. Devotions in French.
11. A French book.

12. Book of William le March (le Maréchal) in French.
13. Book of king Herlus (or Artus?) in French.
14. Another French book.

The secular complexion of this list, and the fondness for light literature which it displays, hardly need to be emphasized.

Passing on through the roll of names we pause at William Byholt—described in one place as Vicar of Plumstead—who gives over twenty books, fairly divided among the various subjects. Much the same may be said of Henry Coking, Hamo Hegham, John Mankael or Mankawel, John Preston (perhaps the latest in date of all), Thomas Saltford, and Thomas Wyvelesberghe. There remain certain specialists who deserve a more detailed notice.

William of Clare is the first of these. Nine out of the ten books he gave are concerned with mathematics, astronomy, and natural philosophy. The most interesting which has survived is a tenth century copy of the Geometry of Boethius.

Walterus de S. Georgio gave twelve books, ten of which are medical, and Stephen Hakynton was obviously a Canonist.

Thomas Sport or Sprott, one of the chroniclers of the Abbey, is worth a word or two, though the number of his gifts is only eight. The first is a book of sermons. Then we have a volume of tracts on the monastic life, two copies of his chronicle (one being the Cottonian MS. Tiberius A. IX), three philosophical books, a Table on the Sentences, and a copy of the Decretals.

Two names of considerable interest close our list, those of John of London and Michael de Northgate.

John of London is second only to Abbot Thomas in the number of books he gives. There are nearly eighty of them. Of these, not more than three are theological. Twenty-three are concerned with mathematics and astronomy: twenty-three are medical. Ten are philosophical, six logical, four historical. Three deal with grammar, one contains poetry, the remainder miscellanies. It has long seemed to me something more than probable that the giver of this remarkable collection is identical with a person known, if vaguely known, to fame. I think it most likely that he is no other than the "youth John" whom Roger Bacon educated, and sent with presentation copies of his books to Pope Clement IV in 1267.

When we question Bacon himself on the subject we are met at once by a difficulty. In one page only (Opus Tertium, XI p. 34, ed. Brewer) does he speak of a John of London. "There are only two perfect mathematicians," he says, "Master John of London and Master Peter of Maharncuria, the Picard. There are two other good ones, Master Campanus of Novara, and Master Nicholas the teacher of Lord Amaury de Montfort." On the other hand the references to the youth John are frequent enough. One principal passage is in the Opus Tertium (XIX, XX) which tells us that John came to Bacon at the age of 15 and was taught by him for five or six years, being at the time of writing 21 years old at most. Bacon is warm in his praises of John. "There is no one even at Paris who knows more of the roots of philosophy than he does, though as yet he has produced none of its fruits, on account of his youth." It is important to remember that he speaks of John throughout as a young man—puer, juvenis, adolescens, are the words employed. Can the person thus described be identical with a Magister John of London, one of the only two perfect mathematicians in Europe? I cannot think so.

Why, then, is Bacon's young pupil ever spoken of as John of London? The evidence for the name is late, but it is abundant. Leland, Bale, Pits, Antony à Wood, and Tanner all agree in using it, and their statements are repeated, one hopes not without cause, in the Dictionary of National Biography. Antony à Wood's testimony is particularly important. It is given in his life of Bacon, and I quote from Brewer's translation (l. c. p. xc): "I may here state in reference to John of London, who was sent...to Pope Clement, that both for Bacon's sake and his own merits he was advanced to some dignity, though of what nature I cannot determine. Some affirm that he lived for many years after this, and was eminent for his writings. But as these were produced in a foreign country, no notice of their contents has reached us.

In all probability they have been lost in Italy." The later clauses of the account seem to me to rest only on conjecture. There is nothing to show that Bacon's pupil did not return to England, or that he wrote any works—whether in Italy or elsewhere. True, Tanner attributes two writings to him, viz. : De trigonio circinoque analogico and De speculis comburentibus. Both, he says, are in the Cotton MS. Vitellius C. v. These statements reappear in the Dictionary of National Biography. But a reference to Planta's Catalogue of the Cotton MSS. shows that the John of London who wrote these two books was no other than Dr John Dee.

Nevertheless, I do think it most probable that Leland and the rest had some good reason for calling Bacon's young pupil John of London. There seems to be no confusion of him in their minds with Magister John, and there are indications that they had sources of information which we have not.

In short, I am inclined to give them credit for correctness in this particular, and to conclude that there were two Johns of London, both of whom knew about mathematics, and were contemporaries of Bacon. One was an older contemporary, Magister John of London, the perfect mathematician, the other was the young John, who showed great promise, but as yet had borne no fruit. I do not think I am violating probability by assuming the evidence of two Johns of London at the same time. The name cannot have been much rarer then than that of John Smith at the present day.

At this point comes in our new factor, John of London, the monk of St Augustine's. Is there anything in the list of his library which points to connexion with Roger Bacon, or which indicates his date? We have seen that he was markedly interested in mathematics and astronomy : I now add that he possessed a number of Bacon's works, and also the work of Bacon's other perfect mathematician, Peter de Maharncuria, on the magnet. The time at which he lived, so far as it can be deduced from the books he possessed, may be fixed at some time late in the thirteenth or early in the fourteenth century. One table of eclipses runs from 1273 to 1331. All this would suit well with the little we know about Bacon's pupil John; and I think I may claim at least the merit of a high probability for the conjecture that the youth John returned from his mission to the Pope, became in later life a member of the Benedictine order, entered the monastery of St Augustine, and there pursued his scientific studies, leaving his books in due course to the library of his house.

If we are reduced to conjectures about the identity of John of London, we are dealing with certainties in the case of Michael de Northgate. No one doubts that he is the author of the Ayenbite of Inweyt, that famous monument of the Kentish dialect of the fourteenth century. As Sir Frederick Madden noticed long ago, the single copy of the Ayenbite which we possess (it is in the autograph of the author) is entered in our catalogue¹, where it appears as Liber in anglico Michaelis de Northgate cum CC. 2º fo. ire vor alse. That same book is now MS. Arundel 57 in the British Museum.

Besides his own work, Michael gave rather more than 20 volumes to the library; but, small as it is, his collection has a character of its own. Six or seven of his books are devotional, three have to do with Natural History (Aristotle de Animalibus is one, and Bacon's Experimental Science another). He had, besides, books on astronomy and surgery, and—what marks him off from John of London—he was clearly a good deal interested in Alchemy. Our catalogue is, I believe, the only document apart from his own writing which throws any light on Michael's personality, and the information it affords us is quite new.

4. Leland's Panegyric.

Not more than a generation intervened between the compiling of our catalogue and the visit of Leland to the Abbey, which gives us, as it did in the case of Christ Church, a last view of it before the Dissolution. In two of his works Leland has given us information about the library. We have in his Collectanea (IV p. 7) the rough notes which he made on the spot, and in his Commentarii de Scriptoribus Britannicis, the expanded form of the notes. The former passage does not tell us much that we could not ascertain from the catalogue. It shows that Leland had been interested by the miscellany of Latin poetry now in the University Library at Cambridge (Gg. 5. 35), and it gives a few titles which I do not find in the catalogue: but it is far inferior in interest to the article into which the notes have been worked up. This is in the Commentarii s.v. Thomas Sprottus, and though it is somewhat lengthy, I think it worth while to translate very nearly the whole of it in this place.

Leland begins by saying in a good many words that the memory of Sprott deserves to be kept green, and thereafter continues: "When I was of late making a somewhat extended tour in Kent for the purpose of investigating its antiquities (of which, owing to the coming of so many Romans to the ports of Lympne and Richborough, it has great plenty), and of set purpose paid a visit to the library of the monks of St Augustine, or in other words to a rich store-house of ancient manuscripts, I came, as luck would have it, upon the History of William Thorn, monk of St Augustine's, in which he has recorded the acts of his Abbots. With my wonted avidity I at once began to read it, and lo! in the very preface of the book, he declared himself to be but the excerptor of Sprott, who wrote an eloquent History of his abbots from the arrival in Britain of Augustine the Apostle of the English to the year of our Lord 1272. Yet how I wish at this point that Thorn had been less laborious than he was, since in perfecting his own work it seems as if he had done an injury to that of others. For Sprott's History is not to be found at Canterbury, and has in all likelihood entirely perished. Still, we have the work of his excerptor Thorn—a work by no means to be despised: and in it there shine forth not only the good deeds of the Abbots of St Augustine, but every now and then those of the Kings of Kent. Of Thorn, more shall be said in the proper place.

"This is all that I had at the moment to say by way of commending Sprott to the memory of scholars. But what if I should now go on to commend to posterity the library of St Augustine's which I mentioned just now? Should I not by doing so gratify the lovers of antiquity? Listen, then, you antiquaries, to facts not generally known. Augustine, when sent by Gregory the Great to Britain, procured by the means of his friends large numbers of Greek and Latin works in Italy, and had them sent to him. When he died he left them all, as pledges of virtue, to his monks. The Greek books have been destroyed, some by the tooth of time, others by fire: others again have been stolen. Of the Latin books, on the other hand, which are written in Roman capital letters in the ancient manner, the following still exist and bear all the marks of an almost unbelievable antiquity: namely two volumes (each) containing the Four Gospels, but in a version differing from the common one: a Psalter dedicated by Jerome to Damasus, Pope of Rome, which I could willingly believe to be an archetype (autograph). Besides these, two most choice Commentaries on the Psalms, which are so old as to be illegible save by a very keen-eyed reader. In these the authors' names nowhere appear. There, too, are the Commentaries of Philippus on Job, not to mention many other authors by no means common, whose proper designations do not occur to me. The Archbishops and Abbots who followed Augustine were at great pains and expense to increase this library. Among them the chief were Theodore of Cilicia and Adrian of Africa, both of them men of the greatest excellence and learning, and men to whom I am sure that Britain owes the revival of classical study (restitutus linguas).

“Having spoken at moderate length of the growth of the Library of St Augustine's, I will add a few words on its decline; for all things have their vicissitudes. In the reign of Ethelred, the father of the third Edward, the Danes who ravaged Kent ruthlessly laid waste its capital; when, though the Abbey was in some shape spared, it is likely that the library was despoiled in the troubles. Another point is admitted on the authority of William Thorn himself. In the year 1168 the Church of St Augustine was burnt, a catastrophe which, as he says, was the destruction of a multitude of good authors. The subsequent period, however, did even greater havoc among the books, for the ignorant monks tore up the Greek books, which they did not understand, and the Latin ones, which were too old to please them, and employed them to line the book-shelves (in forulorum usus), to mention no meaner uses. For all that, some portion of the ancient library has survived intact to our times. It is within my knowledge that a number of famous authors were transferred some years ago from St Augustine's to the Palace library of my most noble Prince, Henry, eighth of that name: and, if I may mention myself in this connexion, there are in my own possession some not unlearned books taken from the Abbey, which shall shortly see the light. But to what a length have I wandered on! You must have been looking this long time, reader, for the end. Here, then, let an end be made."

Leland's sketch of the history of the library tells, in a few words, the story I have been trying to tell myself in a good many pages. It is therefore unnecessary to comment upon it here, and as it leads us over very conveniently into the period when the monastic collections were dispersed, I may as well embark upon the discussion of that period forthwith.

C. THE DISSOLUTION, AND DISPERSION OF THE TWO LIBRARIES.

At the moment of the Dissolution the monasteries of Christ Church and St Augustine's possessed between them at least three thousand manuscripts (probably more) not including some hundreds of service-books. What they may have possessed in the way of printed books we have not, and I suppose we never shall have, any idea. Personally, I do not think it very likely that printed books were ever very common in the main libraries of English abbeys. Individual monks doubtless possessed such things and, what is more to the point, monasteries occasionally had printing-presses of their own. But, when all is said, the specimens of printed books now existing which can be proved to have belonged to monasteries in this country are exceedingly few. I can see two reasons for this. No doubt the majority of monks would identify the productions of the press with that New Learning which as a body they mistrusted: and, again, they probably thought, with some show of reason, that their libraries were already sufficiently well provided with copies of the ordinary patristic and scholastic authors. Most likely the class of printed books which they were most ready to purchase were service-books, and these were not bought for the libraries, but for use in church or in private.

The lives of the two great monasteries of Canterbury were terminated within a short period. The deed of surrender of Christ Church is dated in March 1539, that of St Augustine's in July 1538. The destinies of the two houses were of course widely different. While Christ Church was reorganized as a Cathedral of the new foundation, St Augustine's was swept away. What became of their libraries? I am afraid it is only too clear that no systematic effort was made to preserve them on the spot. Among the few scores of manuscripts now in possession of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury I have found only about twenty from the old library of Christ Church and about half-a-dozen from St Augustine's. So far, then, as the ecclesiastical authorities are concerned there has been an almost complete dispersion. Was there, we next ask, any transference of large masses of books to royal or noble hands? Leland, we saw, definitely states that a quantity of copies of good authors were taken to the Royal Library before the Dissolution: but, long as I have searched among the manuscripts of that collection, I have found no such number of Canterbury books—let alone St Augustine's books—as Leland's words would lead one to expect. A good proportion, moreover, of the St Augustine's books which are in the Royal Collection came there in James I's time, when Prince Henry purchased Lord Lumley's library. We might have expected, again, that Cranmer, the first archbishop of the newly-founded Cathedral, would enrich his "study of books" from Canterbury: but here again we are disappointed. Cranmer had not many Canterbury books. Whatever was done, in short, in the way of rescuing and collecting these treasures was the work of private hands.

There seems to have been one resident in Canterbury who interested himself in the fate of the books from St Augustine's. This was John Twinc or Twyne, schoolmaster and mayor of the city. It is pretty clear that he once possessed our catalogue, and his name is scribbled in it once or twice. It also seems most probable that the catalogue and a considerable number of manuscripts from the Abbey passed from him to Dr John Dee, and from him again to John Twyne's grandson, Brian Twyne. This latter bequeathed them to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where they now are. The library of Corpus Christi is the only one known to me which contains anything like a connected group of St Augustine's books. A good many scattered volumes made their way into Sir Robert Cotton's hands, but they came, I cannot doubt, as scattered volumes; and the same may be said of the books saved by Archbishop Parker and by Bancroft, the founder of the Lambeth Library. As to the precise circumstances under which the books were collected we cannot expect to know much. The Homer among Parker's manuscripts was got from a baker at Canterbury. The Cotton MS. Cleopatra B. XIII contains a life of St Dunstan, which John Joscelin, Parker's secretary, says he found among the old manuscripts of St Augustine's in August, 1565. But such notes are infrequent, and the exact processes employed by the early collectors are, and are likely to remain, dark to us. It is antecedently probable that Kentish amateurs such as the Derings of Surrenden Dering came into possession of a good many Canterbury books; yet at this moment I can cite no more than one such volume as having been certainly theirs—a chronicle called that of William Thorn, which is now in the University Library at Cambridge¹.

Very few Canterbury books have I detected in foreign libraries. The Bible of St Geneviève written by the Christ Church scribe Mainerius (Paris, Bibl. S. Geneviève) was, so far as I can see, not written for Christ Church but for a foreign purchaser. Inquiries at Rome and Paris, and a careful study of French provincial libraries by means of their catalogues, have elicited no results. I can only look with hope to a few collections, such as the manuscripts of Queen Christina at the Vatican, and the Royal Library of Turin, which I have as yet been unable to examine as I should wish. Munich, too, may possibly help us. On the whole, however, it is very improbable that even a score of Canterbury manuscripts will be identifiable on the Continent. As to the Utrecht Psalter, which we are sure was once at Christ Church, I think it most probable, seeing that it has left no trace in the catalogue, that it was a loan from some foreign house.

I have as yet not said anything of the fate of the Christ Church library. Inasmuch as the building in which it was kept, and to a certain extent the institution which owned it, survived instead of being swept away, it stood a better chance than its sister or rival at St Augustine's, and, as a matter of fact, a good many more books that belonged to it are now traceable. Not many, as I have already said, are in their old home at Canterbury. I believe that as a matter of fact, more are to be seen in the libraries of Cambridge than anywhere else. It so happens that the collections of two Archbishops, largely recruited from Christ Church, made their way to the University. Parker's books, as we all know, are at Corpus Christi College, Whitgift's at Trinity: and Trinity possesses, besides Whitgift's books, those of Thomas Nevile, Dean of Canterbury, and of George Willmer, a Kentish man. Add to these the waifs and strays that have come to the University Library, to St John's College, and elsewhere, and you arrive at a total of over 130 volumes. The British Museum, the Bodleian, and Lambeth are also important contributors, but they do not in this respect rival Cambridge.

I do not wish anyone to imagine that I consider myself to have done absolutely all that can be done in the way of identifying the scattered Canterbury books. I do think that the additions which future investigators will make to my list will not in all probability number so much as one hundred; but if I have learnt anything from my rather persistent investigation of libraries it is that there is really no limit to be set to the wanderings of manuscripts. The collections which ought to be most strictly local often contain the strangest interlopers: there is a Bury book at Hereford, and one from Abbey Dore at Durham, while York has Durham and Leicester manuscripts. These phenomena surprise me more than does the occurrence of Scottish manuscripts at Wolfenbüttel or of English ones at Douai, for Wolfenbüttel possesses the libraries of a series of learned collectors, and at Douai there were English monks.

It is not, then, to be supposed that my search for Canterbury books claims to be exhaustive; but at least I hope to have given in this volume sufficient data for the future identification of any books that are in a state to be identified.

D. BOOKS IN LEARNED AND VERNACULAR LANGUAGES.

I have a few words to add upon two subjects. One, the existence of books in languages other than Latin in the Canterbury libraries: the other, the artistic productions of the Canterbury Scriptoria.

Of books in vernacular languages there was no lack at Canterbury. Christ Church was rich in Anglo-Saxon books, as we have seen. St Augustine's, though it did possess several, only takes note in its catalogue of a Genesis in English (no. 95), and of the Ayenbite of Inweyt (no. 1536), which, of course, is not Anglo-Saxon. The Genesis in English I took for granted until quite recently must have perished. But on comparing the entry in the catalogue with the great Anglo-Saxon Heptateuch (Cotton Claudius B. IV) in the British Museum I found that they corresponded. The first leaf of the Heptateuch is gone, but the second begins with the words set down in our catalogue: and so a home has been found for one of the most famous of our early illustrated books; for Claudius B. IV is copiously enriched with pictures. On the other hand, St Augustine's was far richer in French books than Christ Church, and we know (though the fact does not appear in the catalogue) that the manuscript of the old German Carmina Cantabrigiensia was in its library. Dover (for I may anticipate a little) had French and English books¹, and also a Psalter glossed in an "unknown tongue," which turns out to be merely Latin written in an Irish hand, and with some Irish glosses. Turning from vernacular to learned languages, I find but one solitary note of a Hebrew book at either library. St Augustine's had a Psalterium Hebraicum (no. 89). I am aware that this may possibly mean the Latin version by Jerome, known as the Hebraica; but on the other hand Psalters in Hebrew and Latin were far from rare: in fact, Hebrew books in general were so much commoner than Greek books that I am even mildly surprised that no more than one such had made its way to Canterbury. This particular book is marked in the Register (p. 174) as being "in the hands of the Duke of Gloucester," and also—perhaps by consequence—as being lost.

Greek is, for a wonder, almost well represented. In the earliest catalogue of Christ Church we find something called unmistakably Donatus grece (no. 25). This must have been a Greek grammar: I can hardly doubt that it was that of Dionysius Thrax, the inventor, as he may almost be called, of the verb τύπτω. The book disappears from the later catalogues.

On a fly-leaf of a Christ Church Arator of the 11-12th century at Trinity College, Cambridge (13. 14. 3) some monk of the 12th century has written the words stomen kalos stomen meta founi (στώμεν καλῶς στῶμεν μετὰ φόβου), words familiar to anyone who has read Greek liturgies but which never, so far as I know, made their way into a Latin rite (though I have encountered them in a charm). There is a probability that the writer had seen them in a Greek book, or heard them in a Greek church.

Until lately I should have been obliged to pass at once from the twelfth century to the end of the fifteenth for my next evidence for the presence of Greek books at Christ Church; but a little discovery came just in time to bridge over the gap. Among the Canonici manuscripts in the Bodleian Library is one (Canon. gr. 35) of the thirteenth century, which contains the Octateuch (Genesis to Ruth) in Greek. It was recently sent over to the University Library at Cambridge for the use of the editors of the larger Cambridge Septuagint, and I had an opportunity of looking at it. An inscription on the first leaf—carefully washed out in old times—caught my eye, and my delight was great when I read the words liber ecclesie Christi Cant., written in a hand probably of the fourteenth century or at least early in the fifteenth¹. The date of the inscription is plainly long anterior to the time of Prior Sellinge. There was further evidence to show that the volume had been in Western Europe for a long time, for at the beginning was a leaf, taken from a Latin MS. of the thirteenth century, of Interpretationes nominum Hebraicorum. The volume is no importation of the Renaissance period, but a monument of that earlier revival of Greek learning in England which Grosseteste initiated and Bacon fostered, but which never attained maturity.

Truly a chequered career has this Canonici Octateuch had. Soon after it was written, either Grosseteste or some one in his pay brought it to England, probably from South Italy or Sicily. How it came to Christ Church we ask in vain, but it is clear that during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries it rested there. Presumably it returned to the Continent at the Dissolution, and thereafter its history is a blank until it reappears early in the nineteenth century in the hands of the Abate Canonici at Venice. It is a lucky chance that has brought it back to a permanent home in England.

Apart from Prior Sellinge's collection we have few traces of Greek books even in the latest period of our history. Three are all that I can find. In Ingram's list of repaired books (1708) no. 284 is a liber grecorum. The opening words of its second leaf are not given, a fact which I interpret as showing that the book really was a Greek book, and that Ingram could not read it. It may quite well have been the Octateuch of which I have spoken. Further, Leland has a note of the Greek books in this library. One contained Job, Solomon (i.e. the five Sapiential books), Isaiah and Jeremiah, the other was a Psalter. It is probable enough that the former was a companion to the Octateuch, and that we still have the latter in one of the Psalters which, as Archbishop Parker would have it, belonged to Theodore of Tarsus.

The collection of Greek books at St Augustine's may fairly be described as modest. It consisted of a Psalter in Greek and Latin, and a part of Roger Bacon's Greek grammar, which belonged, as we might expect, to John of London. This much the catalogue tells us, and to the information which it gives I have nothing to add.

E. DECORATION OF CANTERBURY BOOKS.

I can give only a brief space to the consideration of my second point; the artistic productions of the Canterbury scribes. When a really comprehensive history of our ancient English art is written it will be found I imagine that the Canterbury school rivalled those of Winchester and St Alban's in importance. It is one of my objects in this book to supply data for identifying the production of this school, and thus pave the way to this large undertaking: it is not among my objects to anticipate that undertaking on the strength of a partial study. Still I shall not be going out of my proper sphere if I point out one or two leading facts.

Our oldest illustrated book, that which we have seen reason to believe has been longer in England than any other, is a Canterbury book, but not a Canterbury production. I mean the "Gregorian" Gospels (no. 286) at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. Another famous book, the Gospels of MacDurnan at Lambeth, was given by Athelstan to Christ Church. This, therefore, is an importation: and a third of the same class is the glorious Codex Aureus of Stockholm. The Psalter of Count Achadeus, of Carolingian date (884), at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, is another. But among our ancient decorated books there are a good many which may reasonably be regarded as home productions of St Augustine's or of Christ Church. The Gospels numbered 1. E. vi in the Royal collection in the British Museum were, I suspect, written at St Augustine's. The illustrated "Caedmon" (Junius 11) I persist in assigning to Christ Church. The Heptateuch (Claudius B. IV) we know is from St Augustine's.

Both of the English copies of the Utrecht Psalter I connect with Canterbury, Eadwine's quite certainly with Christ Church, Harley 603 very confidently with St Augustine's. Claudius A. III, a collection of Christ Church privileges, has one gorgeous picture which may probably have been done in the monastery: and I might mention other books anterior to the twelfth century which are of some artistic interest. In the twelfth century the yield of decorated Canterbury manuscripts is considerable. A good store of books with fine initials is to be seen at Trinity College, Cambridge, nearly all from Christ Church, and other libraries are not destitute of them. A Josephus at St John's College, Cambridge, of which the other volume is in the University Library, may be singled out as a good typical example. It is evident that Christ Church at this time did something in the way of supplying books to other houses: strictly speaking, perhaps I ought to say another house, namely that of Rochester. I had noticed that among the extant Rochester books (which are by no means few) a good many were written in a hand unmistakably like that of Christ Church. This fact might be explained by reference to the nearness of the two houses, and the probability that Rochester might have copied Christ Church habits of writing and ornament. However, two volumes which recently came under my notice supplied a simpler explanation even than this. At Trinity College the manuscript B. 2. 34 is a Christ Church book, with plain indications of origin and discoverable in the catalogue. The manuscript O. 4. 7 is avowedly a Rochester book. In contents, ornament and script it is absolutely a sister volume to B. 2. 34. Again the Royal

MS. 4 C. IV is to all appearance a typical Christ Church book. But it is not in the Christ Church catalogue, and it is in the Rochester catalogue: and it was given to Rochester by Archbishop Baldwin. The explanation of the similarity between Christ Church and Rochester books, then, I take to be that the Rochester monks had books written for them at Christ Church.

Towards the end of the twelfth century we have fine examples of Christ Church decoration in the glosses of Herbert de Bosham on the Psalms and Epistles (at Trinity College and in the Bodleian) and in the glossed Gospels at the former library. It is at about this period that we find a form of decoration in the initials which (provisionally) I regard as characteristic of Christ Church. This consists in filling the interlacements of the polychrome initials with numbers of little white lion-like animals. How far we should be justified in assigning books to Christ Church merely on the strength of the occurrence of this form of ornament I do not undertake to say: but I will say that it does quite frequently occur in Christ Church books.

The twelfth century also gives us the magnificent Bible of Mainerus now in the Library of St Geneviève in Paris. That this book was never in the Christ Church Library seems most probable. In the seventeenth century it belonged to the Abbey of St Lupus at Troyes. It is not in a characteristic Canterbury hand, nor does the decoration specially suggest a Canterbury artist. All that the writer really tells us of his local origin is contained in the first words of the long colophon in which he treats of the names and characters of his parents, brothers, and sister. These first words are "Hanc bibliothecam scripsit Mainerus scriptor Cantuariensis." The whole colophon may be seen printed in the notes to T. Wright's Political Songs (Camden Society, p. 354).

Among the later books that may be assigned with some confidence to St Augustine's Abbey are the Bible of Abbot Robert (Brit. Mus. Burney 11), the Lambeth Apocalypse (no. 209), and the very similar Apocalypse now in the possession of Mr H. Y. Thompson, which, begun, as I can hardly doubt, at St Augustine's, was exported to Italy and there completed. Another fine illustrated Apocalypse (Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, no. 20) was given to the Abbey library by dame Juliana de Leybourne, Countess of Huntingdon (d. 1350). The late fourteenth and fifteenth centuries have not (so far) yielded much. It is no doubt the case that the professional lay illuminator usurps to a great extent the place of the monastic scribe in these centuries, and that the best artistic work is commonly done for great personages, lay or clerical, and not for the libraries of religious houses. I will only note that there are a good many books in existence which were written for the later Archbishops, such as Morton, Warham, and Pole; but it is very doubtful whether these ever formed part of the library of Christ Church.

F. THE PRIORY OF ST MARTIN AT DOVER.

The history of the two great libraries of Canterbury has now been set forth as completely as I am capable of doing it; but this volume also includes the catalogue of the not unimportant library of Dover Priory, and something must be said by way of introduction to it.

The foundation to which it belonged was subordinate to Christ Church, Canterbury. The date of its permanent establishment was 1139, and Archbishop Theobald was its founder. Into the history of the lengthy disputes between the mother and daughter houses I have neither inclination nor occasion to enter; nor have I found any indication, in such documents as I have consulted, of vicissitudes likely to have affected the library of the Priory. In short, our investigations may be legitimately confined, so far as I can see, to the catalogue itself and to such Dover books as still exist.

The catalogue forms a volume by itself. It is now MS. Bodley 920 in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. I print it here from an excellent transcript made for me by Mr W. H. Allnutt. The book is legibly written and in good condition, save for the fact that towards the end the inner corners at the top of the leaves have suffered from damp.

It is the work of John Whytefeld¹, who was probably at the time precentor (for he speaks of the precentor as the officer normally in charge of the library) and was drawn up in 1389, in the priorate of John Newenham (1372-1392). These facts are gathered from the author's own preface.

The character of the work is remarkable. In the elaborate, I might say tender care which has been exercised in its compilation, it stands almost alone among medieval catalogues.

It is divided into three sections. In the first we have a shelf list of the books. Here, besides the press-marks and title of the first tract in the book, we are told (1) the opening words of the leaf selected for the identification of the volume, (2) on which leaf these words occur, (3) the number of leaves in the volume, (4) the number of tracts in the volume.

In the second section the shelf list is repeated: but this time we learn the whole contents of each volume, the first words of each tract, and the number (and side) of the leaf on which each tract begins.

The third section contains an alphabetical list of all the works in the library. This I have not printed, for it adds nothing to our knowledge.

John Whytefeld is at great pains to explain his system in the prefaces to the several sections. I have thought it worth while to give an English translation of these prefaces in order to show what meaning I personally attach to my author's not always lucid Latin².

² My translation of the preface to Part I has already been printed by Mr J. W. Clark (Care of Books, p. 194). Part of Mr Clark's comment on the arrangements indicated by Whytefeld is as follows: "Distinctio probably denotes a bookcase or press, divided into 7 grades, and probably placed against the wall, the word gradus here meaning a flat shelf, instead of one set at an angle as in former instances. If this explanation be correct, we have here a very early instance of shelves in such a position." I may add that the general impression I derive from the Preface is of a book-room similar to that which I have supposed to be indicated in Eastry's Catalogue.

In dimensions the collection was more than respectable. It contained 450 volumes¹. They were arranged according to subject in the following classes.

Distinction	A	contained	Bibles and glossed books of the Bible.
„	B	„	the Sentences, Historia Scholastica, etc.
„	C	„	Sermons and other Theological books.
„	D	„	„ „
„	E	„	„ „
„	F	„	Civil and Canon Law.
„	G	„	„ „
„	H	„	Logic, Philosophy, Rhetoric, Medicine, Chronicles, Romances.
„	I	„	Poetry, Grammar, Dictionaries.

Of these 450 books I have so far succeeded in identifying only about fifteen, though I can hardly suppose that no more are in existence. We have, as has been seen, ample means for identifying them in the catalogue, and the press-mark found in the books themselves is unusually conspicuous. It is inscribed on the lower margin of a leaf near the beginning, and consists of the following component parts.

(1) Capital letter and Roman figure separated by pairs of lozenge-shaped dots. These denote the distinctio and gradus.

(2) Title of the first treatise in the volume.

(3) The dictio probatoria, i.e. the opening words of some early leaf, by no means always the second leaf.

(4) The number of leaves in the volume, in Arabic figures.

¹ Four or five volumes are added to this number in Part II, which on the other hand omits nearly forty titles, and disturbs the order of some others.

(5) Arabic figure denoting the number of treatises in the volume.

For example the British Museum manuscript, Arundel 16 (Osbern's Life of St Dunstan), has the following press-mark, D: vii. Vita sancti Dunstani...regnante magnifico...81...4. This same Arundel manuscript provides me with the one bit of evidence I can bring forward to show that the Dover monks ever received books from Christ Church Priory. This particular volume is written in the Christ Church hand of the twelfth century, and has, besides, a mark on the upper corner of its first leaf (V) which shows that it must once have stood on the Christ Church shelves.

The two most interesting relics of this collection are both in Cambridge libraries. They are, first, a magnificent Bible in two volumes at Corpus Christi College, and second, the well-known Irish Psalter at St John's College. This latter is curiously described—not in the catalogue, but in the title that John Whytefeld has written in the book itself—as “psalterium uetus ydiomate incognito glosatum.” As a matter of fact the language of the glosses is Latin. Evidently fourteenth century students were baffled by the Celtic minuscule.

A peculiarity in this catalogue which I have not encountered elsewhere is its method of entering such books as were worthless owing to dilapidation. In several cases (e.g. under B. II. 5) we meet with the expression “Mustardier quia nichil ualet” or simply “Mustardier.” I take this to mean that the book was only fit for wrapping up mustard or for the like mean uses. It is in any case curious.

The only addition which I have made to the text of the Dover catalogue, besides a few notes and identifications, is a list of the donors of books. These are sparsely given, but are not uninteresting. John Whytefeld appears as the most considerable giver of books. His date we know: that of most of the others (save the Priors) must remain uncertain.

G. CONCLUDING REMARKS.

The Dover Catalogue is followed by a series of Appendixes, in the first of which I have put together Leland's notices of the Canterbury and Dover Libraries, and also such other records of the donations of books as could not be dignified with the name of catalogues. They have for the most part been noticed in the course of this Introduction ; and need no further description here. After these I have placed what seems to me a very important section of the whole work. If it is not large in compass, it represents the results of a great many days of research. It consists of the identification of all the extant Canterbury and Dover books that I have been able to discover. I have arranged them in the order in which they occur in the catalogues. I have already said that I am not so rash as to suppose that I have made a clean sweep even of English libraries. There must be quite a considerable number of Canterbury MSS. still awaiting identification. My experience in the case of the Bury books has convinced me that this must inevitably be the case. To the list of 300 or more books from Bury which I published in 1895 I can now add about a score. For the guidance of future searchers I will state briefly what collections of manuscripts I have wholly or partially examined in my hunt for Canterbury books. Of Cambridge libraries I have searched well-nigh all, with good results. At Oxford I have investigated, volume by volume, several hundreds of the Bodley MSS., and have examined less exhaustively a great many other books in the Bodleian. In the Oxford College libraries, excepting that of Corpus Christi, I have not done so much ; but I have read very carefully Coxe's catalogue.

At the British Museum I have looked through a very large number of the Cottonian and Royal manuscripts, and have not neglected the Arundel, Burney and Harley collections. But I am sure that this last especially has more Canterbury books than have been pointed out by others or by myself.

The Sloane and Additional manuscripts have made small contributions, but await a fuller examination.

I have looked at all the medieval manuscripts at Lambeth Palace and at all those in the Chapter Library at Canterbury which seemed in the least promising. I have been furnished with particulars of a good many at Trinity College, Dublin, and have myself inspected all the Hunterian manuscripts at Glasgow, and all or nearly all the medieval ones in the Advocates' Library at Edinburgh. I have also taken several Cathedral libraries into account, and the Collegiate libraries of Eton and Windsor. In private collections it has not been possible to do much, but I have studied the sale catalogues of the last few years and have gained something from them.

As to foreign libraries something has already been said; the names of Arras, Cambrai, Douai, Brussels, Leyden, and Wolfenbüttel may be instanced as having specially occupied my attention. It was clearly not practicable to defer the publication of this volume until an exhaustive examination had been made of all the great collections. What could be done in the way of inquiries and perusal of catalogues I think I have done; and the result convinces me that an exhaustive examination will produce little, though that little may be of high interest.

In conclusion, I may be allowed to express a hope that the publication of this work may stimulate interest in our lost libraries. A good many ancient catalogues, large and small, still await publication; and several important libraries whose catalogues are not known to exist are largely represented by extant remains in our modern collections. St Alban's and Norwich are among the most notable of these. The work of John Boston of Bury, moreover, and the smaller compilations upon which that work was founded, demand attention. For some of these various tasks I hope to be able to find time in the near future: but there is room for many workers in the field.

CATALOGUE OF THE LIBRARY OF ST AUGUSTINE'S ABBEY, CANTERBURY, FROM MS. 360 (BERNARD 285) IN THE LIBRARY OF TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN.

§ 1. REGISTER OF BOOKS.

The following pages contain a record of the whereabouts of the books in St Augustine's Library at some date very near the end of the fifteenth century. The principle on which it is made out is as follows. Each page of the register is divided into a number of columns, in most cases six: they are numbered from 1 to 133, and each column corresponds to a leaf of the Catalogue (which contains 131 leaves). The lines of each column are numbered, the largest number being 41. Each line corresponds to an entry of a volume (or tract) in the Catalogue. Opposite to each number is recorded the place in which the volume is, or the name of the person in whose hands it is. It must be borne in mind that a large proportion of the entries in the Catalogue are entries of tracts which occur in duplicate, in volumes whose full contents have been given or are to be given elsewhere. The lines corresponding to these entries of duplicates are left blank in the Register. The Register is unfinished: after the column corresponding to f. 123 there are no entries.

The next page is divided into seven columns (unnumbered) and has 34 horizontal lines: but is otherwise blank: the following page has seven columns and is ruled, but otherwise quite blank.

Tabula super subsequentem matriculam ad sciendum quis liber, compilacio, expositio, summa, scriptum, vel tractatus cuiuscumque doctoris vel magistri contineatur in eadem. per primum numerum in quo folio et per secundum in qua columpna inuenies scire poteris

Actus apostolorum glosat. 9

Apocalipsis Iohannis apostoli glosat. 9

Allegorie diuerse 3

Allegorie historiarum petri manducatoris 3

[Added. Allegorie diuersorum uocabulorum biblie 12

Allegorie de homine et partibus eius et super eptaticum 12]
etc.

In no case does a second number seem to be added, and in perhaps a majority of cases there is no number at all.

This Table occupies thirteen leaves in double columns and is followed by one blank leaf. As it appears to add nothing to the information derivable from the catalogue, I have not printed it here.

§ 3.

TEXT OF THE CATALOGUE.

I have numbered the volumes throughout, omitting from the numeration those items which are merely cross-references. I have marked later additions to the Catalogue with an asterisk, and extant volumes with a dagger.

WHYTEFELD: PRINTED FROM MS.
BODLEY 920.

PART I.

PREFACE.

PResens hec matricula bibliotece prioratus Douorre Anno incarnationis dominice 1389. sub regimine ffratris Iohannis Neunam prioris eiusdem ecclesie professi compilata principaliter in tres particulas extat segregata. Vt scilicet prima particula de numero et perfecta voluminum cognitione loci precentorem informet, secunda ad sollicitam leccionis frequentiam ffratres studiosos prouocet, et tertia de singulorum tractatum repercione festina scolaribus itinera manifestet. Et licet cuique particule ad faciliorem ipsius cognitionem quedam speciales et breues rubricelle premittantur, huic tamen prime particule principaliter ad tocius matricule noticiam manifestiorem notule quedam preferuntur generales. Primo quod tota hec biblioteca in nouem separatis distinccionibus secundum nouem primas alphabeti literas ipsis distinccionibus patenter affixas diuiditur, Ita vt A. primam distinccionem, B. secundam, C. terciam, et sic successiue per ordinem denotent intranti. Quelibet autem dictarum nouem distinccionum in septem gradus eciam separatos numeralibus latinorum signis post literas ipsas distincionales adiectis noscetur separata, Incipiendo graduum computacionem a loco inferiori in altum procedendo, videlicet ut gradus infimus qui primus est sic signetur I., secundus uero sic. II., tercius sic. III., sicque ulterius in septenarium numerum compiletur. Libri insuper ipsius bibliotece vniuersi ad faciliorem ipsorum voluminum cognicionem algorismi figuris numeralibus per singula folia designantur. Quia vero in multis voluminibus plures continentur tractatus, nomina ipsorum tractatuum licet non semper congrue baptisatorum in singulis voluminibus prescribuntur, et figura numeralis algorismi ipsis nominibus designans folium in quo tractatus ipse incipiat consequenter apponitur cum A. litera vel B. protinus subiuncta, vt scilicet A. primum latus folii et B. secundum denotet in hac parte. Ipsa eciam volumina singula non solum exterius in tegmine verum eciam interius iuxta nomina contentorum in sui principio affixas habent literas suas distincionales cum signis gradualibus adiunctis. Et litere huiusmodi distincionali modica figura algorismalis includitur per quam quotus sit liber ille in ordine locacionis gradus memorati plenius declaratur. In secundo aut tercio vel quarto folio voluminum vel prope illud in margine inferiori premissis iterum literis distinccionalibus et signis gradualibus predictis nomen voluminis inseritur, et post modico spacio dimisso quomodo folium illud quod probatorium cognicionis dicetur incipiat protinus titulatur. Quotque folia in toto ipso volumine contineantur proximus numerus algorismi tunc sequens declarabit; adiunctus protinus ibidem finaliter numerus alius figuralis numerum eiusdem voluminis contentorum tractatuum pandit manifeste. Premissis igitur retenti memorie firmiter commendatis patebit manifeste quibus distincione, gradu, loco, vel ordine singula volumina tocus bibliotece debeant collocari, quibusque foliis et foliorum lateribus singulorum principia tractatuum poterint reperiri Eo quod voluit presentis matricule et bibliotece compilator per varias huiusmodi distinccionum, graduum, ordinum, quotacionum, tractatum, et voluminum designaciones et notabilitates expressas quatenus valuit, future monasterii sui indemnitati providere, ac thesaurum huiusmodi diripere vel commutare volencium malignitati viam precludere, et defensionis ac resistencie propugnaculum erigere salutare. Et vere non offendet compilantem set diliget evidenter quis-cumque hanc matriculam adhuc multipliciter defectiuam in melius duxerit reformandam eciam suo nomini si uoluerit, totaliter applicandam.

A .I. Matricula Johannis Wythefeld——cionis dicitur.

In hac igitur prima matricule particula semper in loco superiori inter nigras lineas ex transuerso protractas Primo preponitur rubia litera distinccionalis et sequetur ibidem signum gradus tetrís signaculis adiunctum Inter ceteras autem lineas rubeas a summo versus deorsum, Primo in parte sinistra protractas, Primo loco ponitur figura numeralis pandens quotus sit liber ille in ordine gradus sui; secundo adiungitur nomen voluminis; Tercio numeralis locus probationis; Quarto dicciones probatorie. Vbi tamen potius ad textus quam ad glosas fieri debent respectus; Quinto numerus foliorum tocius voluminis; Et ultimo numerus contentorum scribitur in lineis memoratis. In quolibet eciam gradu huius particule ad finem spacia quedam vacua relinquuntur vbi futurorum nomina voluminum adquirendorum poterunt situari.

TRANSLATION OF THE PREFACE.

The present Register of the Library of the Priory of Dover, compiled in the year of the Lord's Incarnation 1389 under the presidency of John Neunam prior and monk of the said Church, is separated into three main divisions. The object is that the first part may supply information to the precentor of the house concerning the number of the books and the complete knowledge of them: that the second part may stir up studious brethren to eager and frequent reading: and that the third may point out the way to the speedy finding of individual treatises by the scholars. Now although a brief special preface is prefixed to each part to facilitate the understanding of it, to this first part certain general notes are prefixed, to begin with, for the more plain understanding of the whole Register.

Be it noted, then, first, that this whole library is divided into nine several classes (Distinctions), marked according to the nine first letters of the alphabet, which are plainly affixed to the classes themselves in such a way that A marks out to him who enters the first Class, B the second, C the third, and so on in order. Each of the said nine classes, moreover, will be seen to be divided into seven shelves (gradus), which are also marked off by the addition of Roman numeral figures, following the letters which denote the classes. We begin the numbering of the shelves from the bottom, and proceed upwards so that the bottom shelf, which is the first, is marked thus I, the second thus II, the third thus III. and so the numbering goes on up to seven.

In addition to this, the books of the Library are all of them marked on each leaf with Arabic numerals, to facilitate the ascertaining of the contents of the volumes.

Now since many of the volumes contain a number of treatises, the names of these treatises, although they have not always been correctly christened, are written down under each volume, and an Arabic numeral is added to each name showing on what leaf each tract begins. To this number the letter A or B is subjoined, the letter A here denoting the first page of the leaf, and the letter B the second. The books themselves, furthermore, have their class-letters, and also their shelf-marks, inserted not only outside on their bindings, but also inside, accompanying the tables of contents at the beginning. To such class-letters a small Arabic figure is added, which shows clearly what position the book occupies in the order of placing on the shelf concerned.

On the second, third, or fourth leaf of the book, or thereabouts, on the lower margin the name of the book is written. Before it are entered the above-mentioned class-letters and shelf-numbers, and after it (a small space intervening) are immediately set down the words with which that leaf begins, which I shall call the proof of identification (probatorium cognitionis). The Arabic figures next following will state how many leaves are contained in the whole volume; and finally another numeral immediately following the last clearly sets forth the number of the tracts contained in the said volume.

If then the above facts be securely entrusted to a retentive memory it will be clearly seen in what class, shelf, place and order, each book of the whole Library ought to be put, and on what leaf and which side of the leaf the beginnings of the several treatises may be found. For it has been the object of the compiler of this present register [and] of the Library, by setting forth a variety of such marks and notations of classes, shelves, order, pagination, treatises and volumes, to insure for his monastery security from loss in time to come, to shut the door against the spite of such as might wish to despoil or bargain away such a treasure, and to set up a sure bulwark of defence and resistance. And in truth the compiler will not be offended, but will honestly welcome, any one who shall bring this register—which is still faulty in many respects—into better order, even if he should see fit to place his own name at the head of the whole work.

In this first part of the register, therefore, we have throughout at the top between the black lines ruled horizontally: First the class-letter, in red, and, following it, the shelf-mark, in black characters (tetris signaculis). Then again between the other lines ruled in red, vertically: First, on the left a numeral showing the place of the book in order on its shelf. Then the name of the volume. Thirdly the number of the 'probatory' leaf. Fourthly the 'probatory' words (in the case of which, by the way, reference is made to the text and not to the gloss). Fifthly the number of leaves in the whole volume: and, lastly, the number of the treatises contained in it, all written within the aforesaid lines. In addition there will be left in each shelf of this part, at the end, some vacant space, in which the names of books that may be subsequently acquired can be placed.

PREFACE.

Hec sequens secunda particula pari forma sicut et prima per laterales distinciones Gradus numerales librorum et ordinum cotaciones et nominaciones ac spaciorum dimisiones extat designata Quia tamen quedam volumina vltra signatum sibi titulum vel nomina plura quandoque et fortassis moliora (sic) habent contenta que in graue studencium detrimentum laterent occultata nisi precentorum huic matricule specialius indulgencium suffragiis possent releuari: hic consequenter cuilibet volumini principaliter nominato vt prius et cotato preponitur figura huiusmodi CC¹ ad faciliorem et euidenciozem voluminum ipsorum repercionem Ac ad contentorum in eisdem statim inferius anectendorum sine figura tali differenciam et noticiam pleniorē Que singula tam volumina quam contenta certis et specialibus quibusdam nominibus licet quandoque ab ipsis nostris predecessoribus minus bene inpositis designata: in proximo sequenti spacio post cotaciones predictas per ordinem explicantur: Quibus singulis numerales figuras connectimus in quoto folio voluminis illius vnumquodque incipiat expresse denotantes: litere autem huiusmodi cotacioni sequentes ipsorum latera denotant foliorum, Ita ut per .a. literam primum latus et per .B. secundum vbique cognoscatur.

Preterea viciosum presumptuositatis nomen vitare cupientes, nomina ipsa voluminum vel contentorum eciam inepte collata nullatenus transmutantes, singulorum librorum et tractatum principia per duo aut tria verba sua primordialia in finali huius paginis (-e) spacio duximus explicanda. Vt sic visis voluminum et contentorum nominibus et principiis ac diligenter discussis lector discretus et sapientia peditus oportunis locis et temporibus limam correccionis apponere et melius baptizandis tractatibus vel saltem reformandis verioribus nominacionibus ad profectum studencium valeat indulgere.

TRANSLATION OF THE PREFACE.

This second part next following is set out in form like to the first, marking at the sides the classes, shelves, naming and numbering of the books and rows, and leaving of spaces. But whereas some of the books have, beyond the title or names marked on them, more and perhaps more valuable contents; and these would remain hid, to the great prejudice of students, unless they could be brought to light by the aid of the precentors who have the special care of this register: for this reason there is prefixed to each volume (its short title and number having been given as before) a mark like this, CC¹, in order to make the finding of the books more plain and easy, and also to make a fuller distinction between the short title and the other contents, which are to follow immediately below without any such mark. Both volumes and contents are set down in order in the space next following after the aforesaid numbering, under separate titles, notwithstanding the fact that some of them have been furnished by our predecessors with names not altogether appropriate. To each of these titles we add a numeral which shows clearly on what leaf of the volume each tract begins. The letters which immediately follow these numerals denote the two sides of the leaf. Thus A signifies in every case the first side (page) and B the second.

Furthermore, being anxious to avoid the injurious reputation of being presumptuous, we have nowhere changed the names of the volumes or their contents even where they were improperly given: but we have thought well to set forth the beginning of each book or treatise, in the shape of its first two or three words, in the last space on the page. Thus the reader who is endowed with wisdom and discretion will be able, when he has seen and carefully examined the titles and beginnings of the volumes and their contents, to apply the file of correction at the proper place and time, and employ himself in entitling the treatises better, or at least in substituting titles which are nearer the truth, to the profit of students in general.

After p. 107, which is the last of Part II., are two blank pages.

On p. 110 begins the third Part, which is merely an alphabetical Index of the tracts contained in the various volumes. Nothing would be gained by printing the whole, and therefore only a specimen entry shall be given.

APPENDIX A.

CHRIST CHURCH, CANTERBURY.

I.

NOTES OF MISCELLANEOUS GIFTS TO THE LIBRARY.

In the Registers of Canterbury Cathedral the following notices of miscellaneous gifts and bequests occur: I take them from the reports drawn up by Dr J. B. Sheppard for the Historical Manuscripts Commission (App. to Reports v. viii. ix., 1876-83), and from that by Mr R. L. Poole issued in 1902 (Report on MSS. in various Collections i. 205 sqq.).

1. In MS. A. 14 is a note that Abp Walter Reynolds left a Bible in three volumes to the Prior and Convent in 1327.

2. In Register E (1340) a receipt for three books:

Decretales abbreviate,
Veritas theologie (Thomas Aquinas),
De proprietatibus rerum (Bartholomaeus), given by Abp John Stratford.

3. Ibid., under 1357, a letter from John Grandison, Bp of Exeter, praising the Library of Christ Church, and presenting to it a copy of his Vita S. Thomae.

4. In Register K, R. de Haute bequeaths

Decretals in two volumes, with the gloss of Hostiensis, and a Speculum Iudiciale (Durandi).

5. In Register S (1402) Richard Courtenay, Bp of Norwich, bequeaths

Doctor de Lira (in two volumes).

Milleloquium Augustini.

Dictionarium (in three volumes).

These had belonged to Abp William Courtenay, who had left them to Richard during his life, with a reversion to the Library of the Priory. (See the Archbishop's will in Somner's History, Appendix to Supplement, no. XIII. c, p. 33. Also Ingram's list, nos. 1, 2, 92, 179-181.)

6. In Mr Poole's Report, p. 224, is Inventorium librorum quos reverendissimus in Christo pater ac dominus, dominus Thomas Goldestone, ecclesie Christi Cantuariensis prior, Thome Goldwell contulit.

1	In primis liber Marci Tulli Ciceronis de officiis	2 fo. . . .
2	Item liber de antiqua retorica Cic.	2 fo. dicitur hoc
3	Item liber Ciceronis de Rethoricorum inventione	2 fo. . . . teret
4	Item liber Ciceronis de amicitia	2 fo. quod possent
5	Item opusculum Aristotelis	2 fo. Sub orbe
6	Item opusculum Prisciani	2 fo. primitivis
7	Item meditationes beati Anselmi	2 fo. sed in lege
8	Item lamentaciones Ieremie	2 fo. plorans
9	Item Exposicio super epistolas Pauli	2 fo. vell facio memorare
10	Item Commentarius super Matheum	2 fo. ecclesia cum fidelibus
11	Item liber Cornubiensis super libros Posteriorum	2 fo. a^{co} mo^o
12	Item Commentaria super libros Bucolicorum Georgicorum Eneidosque	2 fo. exivi sc. vendi (?)
13	Item Iuianus (Auianus ?)	2 fo. secula tot mundi
14	Item aliud opusculum exiguum	2 fo. move juxta
15	Item textus philosophie	2 fo. fari sc. subicete
16	Item liber Anticus Magistri sentenciarum	2 fo. consist(e)nd(um)
17	Item parvum tractatum philosophie	2 fo. tivam et talia

(In the handwriting of Prior Goldwell, according to Dr Sheppard, circa 1500.) In the same report on pp. 223 (no. 99), 232 (no. 212), 278 (iii. 31, 49) will be found allusions to books.

7. In the Inventories of Christ Church, Canterbury (W. St J. Hope and J. Wickham Legg, 1902, p. 264), is a list of the manuscripts in the Library of the Dean and Chapter in 1634. With a few doubtful exceptions the 27 volumes enumerated in it are there now.

II.

The following are Leland's notes (Collectanea iv. 10) on books seen by him at Christ Church.

Coenobium Christicolarum.

Baldewinus de sectis haereticorum] Mysterium fidei = no. 95 in Eastry's Catalogue.

Baldewinus super libros Regum = no. 102.

APPENDIX B.

ST AUGUSTINE'S, CANTERBURY.

I.

In Thomas of Elmham's Historia, p. 96, is the account of the "Gregorian" books at St Augustine's which has been dealt with in the Introduction.

De Libris.

In primis habetur in librario Biblia Gregoriana in duobus voluminibus quorum primum habet rubricam in primo folio De Capitulis Libri Genescos.

Secundum volumen incipit a prologo beati Ieronymi super Ysaïam prophetam.

In principio vero librorum in eisdem voluminibus inseruntur quaedam folia quorum aliqua purpurei aliqua rosei sunt coloris; quae contra lucem extensa mirabilem reflexionem ostendunt.

Habetur etiam in eodem librario Psalterium Augustini quod sibi misit idem Gregorius, in cuius primo folio incipiunt Meditationes quaedam devotae taliter annotatae Ecce quantum spatiatum sum in memoria mea etc. usque ad folium quintum ubi incipit Omnis scriptura divinitus inspirata et in altera parte eiusdem folii est Symbolum apostolorum,

Oratio Dominica,

Gloria in Excelsis etc.,

Sanctus Sanctus Sanctus etc.

In sexto folio incipit Psalterium.

In fine vero eiusdem Psalterii sunt Ymni tam nocturnales quam diurnales.

Primus hymnus pro medio noctis est iste	Mediae noctis tempus est
secundus ad gallicantum	Aeterne rerum Conditor
ad matutinas	Splendor paternae gloriae
ad primam	Venite fratres ocuis
ad tertiam	Iam surgit hora tertia
ad sextam	Bis ternas horas explicans
ad nonam	Ter hora trina voluitur
ad vespas	Deus creator omnium
ad completorium	Te deprecamur Domine

In x^{lma}

Hymnus pro die Dominico

Christe qui lux es et dies
Rex aeterne Domine

De natali Domini hymnus

Intende qui regis Israel super cherubin qui sedes a patre (facie) Effrem excita po-tentiam tuam et veni

Ac deinde sequitur pro eodem hymno

Veni Redemptor gentium usque ad finem

In Pascha hymnus

Hic est dies verus dei

In festo apostolorum Petri & Pauli

Apostolorum passio

De S. Johanne Evangelista

Amore Christi nobilis

In vestiario etiam habetur Textus Evangeliorum in cuius principio .x. canones annotantur: et vocatur Textus S. Mildredae eo quod quidam rusticus in Thaneto super eundem textum falsum iurans oculos amittere perhibetur.

Est etiam et aliud Psalterium super tabulam magni altaris positum, quod habet exterius imaginem Christi argenteam planam cum quatuor Evangelistis. In huius Psalterii primo folio incipit Omnis scriptura diuinitus inspirata, in tertio folio incipit Epistola Damasi papae ad Ieronimum, et in fine Versus eiusdem Damasi ac deinde Epistola Ieronimi ad Damasum cum Hieronymi versibus. Deinde in quarto folio De origine Psalmorum in cuius fine distinguit Psalterium in quinque libros. Primus liber finit a Ps. xl videl. Beatus qui intelligit qui sic habet Fiat fiat. Secundus liber a Ps. lxxi videl. Deus iudicium tuum qui sic habet Fiat fiat. Tertius liber a Ps. lxxxviii videl. Misericordias Domini qui sic habet Fiat fiat. Quartus liber a Ps. cv videl. Confitemini ei qui sic habet Fiat fiat. Quintus liber a Ps. cl videl. Laudate Dominum de coelis qui sic habet Omnis spiritus laudet Dominum.

In quinto folio eiusdem Psalterii sequitur expositio de Alleluia secundum Hebraeos Chaldaeos Syros et Latinos.

Item interpretatio Gloriae apud Chaldaeos.

Item interpretatio Ps. cxviii per singulas literas.

In sexto folio sequitur quando psalli vel legi debeat quomodo Hieronymus scribit.

Item ordo Psalmorum per A B C D.

In septimo folio de literis Hebraicis quae in Psalterio scribuntur.

In octavo folio Interpretatio Psalmorum usque ad folium undecimum, ubi incipit textus Psalterii cum imagine Samuelis sacerdotis, et in fine eiusdem psalterii sunt hymni de matutinis, de vespers, et de dominico die, sicut in alio Psalterio praenotato habentur.

Item in librario habetur alius textus Evangeliorum, in quo .x. canones praeponuntur, cum prologo qui sic incipit Prologus Canonum.

Item super tabulam magni altaris ponitur liber cum imagine Christi erecta, argentea, et dextra benedicente, in quo continetur

Conflictus apostolorum Petri et Pauli cum Simone Mago, et Passio co-rundem.

Item Passio S. Andreae apostoli.

Item Passio S. Jacobi.

Passio S. Thomae apostoli.

Passio S. Bartholomaei apostoli.

Passio S. Matthaei apostoli et evangelistae.

Passio SS. apostolorum Simonis et Iudae.

Vita S. Iohannis apostoli et evangelistae.

Item est et alius liber positus super eandem tabulam magni altaris, qui habet exterius imaginem divinae maiestatis argenteam, deauratam, cum lapidibus crystallinis et beryllis per circuitum positis, in quo continetur incipiens a S. Apollinare, et finiens in passione sanctorum martyrum Simplicii Faustini et Beatrixis.

Passionarium Sanctorum

Item super eandem tabulam ad magnum altare ponitur liber cuius exterior apparatus habet unum magnum beryllum in medio cum pluribus aliis lapidibus crystallinis ex omni parte, in quo continetur

Expositio super Epistolas et Evangelia a Dominica iii post octavas Paschae usque ad Dominicam iv post octavas Pentecostes.

Et haec sunt primitiae librorum totius ecclesiae Anglicanae.

II.

The Cotton MS. Vitellius C. xii. contains (ff. 114 sqq.) a splendid Martyrology of cent. xi, xii, formerly at St Augustine's Abbey. At the date viii. Idus decembr. is a note of books bequeathed by Robert Blund, viz.:

Pentathecum glosatum (no. 242).

Glosas super glosas Psalterii et super glosas Epp. Pauli et super glosas iv Ewangeliolorum et super prophetas.

Only the Pentateuch is entered in the Catalogue.

III.

In the Cambridge University Library is a MS., Ff. 4. 40, of the Epistles of Paul, glossed, of cent. xiii, from St Augustine's Abbey (no. 204 in the Catalogue). On the last leaf is Nomina librorum pro quibus scribor in tabula.

- 1 Historia scolastica.
- 2 Sex etates seculi.
- 3 Liber qui dicitur philomena.
- 4 Constituciones sinodales.
- 5 Rubrice de servicio per annum.
- 6 Ordinale Ade de Clare.
- 7 Psalterium Ade de Clare.

- 8 Librum capituli prologus beate Marie.
- 9 Diurnale Michaelis de Norgate.
- 10 Penitenciale Roberti de Flamesbroc (no. 647).
- 11 Epistole pauli (no. 204).
- 12 Sepultura Johannis de Stureya.

Of these nos. 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 12 come under the head of service-books, or books which would not be placed in the library. Nos. 10, 11 are identifiable in the Catalogue: nos. 1-3, 8 are not. The expression scribi in tabula answers to esse in nota in the Christ Church Defectus Librorum. The tabula is a register of books lent, kept (on boards) by the precentor.

IV.

The following are Leland's notes (Collectanea iv. 7) on the Library at St Augustine's.

APPENDIX D.

LIST OF MANUSCRIPTS NOT ENTERED IN THE CATALOGUES.

CHRIST CHURCH, CANTERBURY.

In this section I arrange the books certainly or probably attributable to Christ Church under the headings of the libraries in which they exist. The same process will be pursued in dealing with the books from St Augustine's.

BRITISH MUSEUM.

Cottonian Manuscripts.

Julius B. iii. contains Christ Church matter but has no evidence of Canterbury provenance.

Tiberius A. ii. Gospels given by Athelstan to Christ Church. Written in Germany. Belonged to Otto I.

Tiberius B. i. Orosius Saxonice. Belonged to Robert Talbot. No mark survives.

Tiberius B. iii. (Part 1). Benedictional. Cent. xiii. Has been a splendid book. Kalendar with Christ Church insertions. Passion and Transl. of Aelphege on blue; also his ordination on Nov. 16. Vulganius Nov. 3 etc.

Note on f. 11 that John Garende subsacrist repaired the Psalters in the choir, and also the "sedilia inferioris chori" in 1512, under Prior T. Goldston, and John Goodnyston sacrists.

Tiberius B. iv. The charters of Canute in this are thought to be from a Christ Church copy of the Gospels at St John's Oxford.

Tiberius B. xi. Fragments of Gregory's Pastoral Care said to have belonged to Abp. Plegmund.

Tiberius C. iii. Gemma animae. Cent. xii. Has on last leaf verses on the death of St Thomas.

Claudius A. i. On f. 1 is an old title: Vita S. Wilfredi metricè which resembles those in Christ Church books. Some of the writing resembles that of Christ Church. But Worcester is perhaps a stronger claimant.

Claudius A. iii. Privileges of Ch. Ch. Picture of S. Dunstan. Order of Coronation etc. The Christ Church hand is very marked in places: there is also a fine round hand.

Claudius B. ii. Vita et Epistolae S. Thomae. Cent. xiii early. An initial of Ch. Ch. type on f. 1 b. Very probably this was the copy entered under no. 358. 2 fo. debat memoria.

Claudius C. vi. The first part, Notitia Regionum etc. in a foreign hand. Part II Consuetudines Lanfranci etc. 2 fo. clementer or absolut.

Galba A. ii. Saxon Homilies. Gone. Wanley reports a tradition that it belonged to St Anselm.

Galba E. iii. Chronicle of Ch. Ch. Cent. xiii.

(Galba E. iv. Part 1. Eastry's inventory.)

Galba E. vii. Eulogium Historiarum. The continuator was possibly a monk of Christ Church.

Otho A. i. Gone. Synod of Cloveshoo etc.

Otho A. vi (1). Boethius Saxonice. Perhaps = ii. 307 (Eastry).

Vitellius A. iii. contains: Decreta minora Odonis de Doura (cent. xii.), which should be a Canterbury book.

Vespasian A. ii. Kalendar on f. 19 etc. has Canterbury insertions.

Vespasian D. xiv. Saxon Homilies. Has collect (cent. xii, xiii) for St Thomas of Canterbury.

Vespasian D. xxi. Part 1. Nennius. Hand like that of Ch. Ch. 2 fo. et manent.

Vespasian E. iii. Poems of Reginald of Canterbury.

Titus A. ix. Eadmer Historia novorum. Cent. xiii. In two fine hands. 2 fo. et in nostris tribulationibus.

Cleopatra C. vii. Privileges etc. of Ch. Ch.

Faustina B. vi. Papal letters etc. Canterbury hand.

Royal MSS.

1. C. vii. Joshua etc. glossed. Either Christ Church or Rochester. Cent. xii. Fine initials. 2 fo. que scriptos.

1. D. ix. Gospels given by Canute to Ch. Ch.

6. B. xiii. Athanasius. Cent. xii. 2 fo. uectoria. Hand suggests Ch. Ch.

6. B. xv. Cyprian's Epistolae. Cent. xi. 2 fo. infra te. Good pointed hand, very possibly Ch. Ch.

7. D. xxiv. Wimundus Aversanus. Cent. xi, xii. 2 fo. nante domini. Very possibly Ch. Ch.

8. B. xiv. No. 3. Vita S. Judoci mutilated: hand like that of Ch. Ch.

Arundel MSS.

16. Vita S. Dunstani. Cent. xii. Has the old Ch. Ch. mark \forall . Transferred to Dover (no. 167).

68. Register Ch. Ch. Cent. xiv-xvi.

155. Psalter. Cent. xi, xii. Belonged to W. Hadley supprior, Jo. Waltham, W. Ingram. Procter vendidit anno 1592. Will. Howarde 1592.

Harleian MSS.

56. Osberni Vita Dunstani etc. in Ch. Ch. hand. Cent. xii. 2 fo. igⁱ sinibus. Formerly contained other lives.
 322. ? = Eastry (ii) no. 272.
 652. Homilies. See p. 532.
 1006. Customs etc. of Chr. Ch. Cent. xiv, xv. Belonged to Will. Darell prebendary of Ch. Ch.

LAMBETH PALACE LIBRARY.

20. Martyrology. Cent. xvi.
 69. Missal of Abp. Chichele.
 78. Speculum Parvulorum. Liber compositus et perquisitus dompni W. Chartham monachi huius ecclesie. 1448.
 159. Vitae SS. xvi. Liber d. Jac. Hartey monachi eccl. Chr. Cant. Also has the names of W. Hadley, John Sarysbury, Ric. Hatton.
 180. Russel on Cantica. Cent. xiv. Fratris Th. Stoyl.
 242, 243. Accounts of Ch. Ch. Cent. xiii, xiv.
 244. Register of Abp. Robert Winchelsey.
 303. Chronicle. Cent. xv. Cronica de archiepiscopis. Stephani Byrchinton monachi eccl. Chr. Cantuar.
 399. Summa Raymundi, Nicholai de Iuynghe. Cent. xiii, xiv. N. de Ivinghoe occurs as a monk of Christ Church (d. 1334), Searle, p. 179.
